Herr Goebbels Brags.
One American at Rest.
Small New York Families.
Tumbler Pigeon Policy.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

IN BERLIN, Herr Goebbels, minister of propaganda, praising Hitler, says:

"There will be no kaiser or king."

He might have added that none is needed, since in Hitler Germany has a kaiser, king and dictator, "three-in-one." Herr Goebbels boasts:

"Hitler does not start the day asking: 'What do leading bankers say?' Rather, bankers begin the day asking: 'What does Hitler say?'"

Germany has no monopoly of that condition. Herr Goebbels would be surprised to hear how many bankers and other gentlemen in this country, who once thought they had money, begin the day asking:

"What does Roosevelt say?"

ONE AMERICAN, at least, is out of his troubles forever. Mr. Medlock, forty-eight years old, rented cotton land in Greenville County, S. C., and thought he knew how much cotton he ought to plant to pay rent for his farm.

After he had finished planting, government inspectors measured his cotton fields, and ordered him to plow under three acres. He had gone beyond his allowance. Medlock complained to his family for two or three days, then went behind the barn and shot himself though the heart, deciding that he, instead of the excess cotton, should be "plowed under."

IN NEW YORK, where many discuss birth control, there seems to be no lack of information. A toll of 485,525 families by the "city housing authorities" shows "two-person" families, those having no children, numbering 131,488, the biggest classification. "Three-person" families come second, 105,723 of them with one child. Families with as many as two children number only 88,284.

At that rate, forbidding emigration, the population should soon be small enough to suit any "Little American."

DID YOU EVER see a tumbler pigeon, tumbling, rolling over and over in flight, not going far, nor fast?

You may see a good imitation of that pigeon in our financial policy. First, to please silver men and provide more money, silver was ordered purchased, you had to give up your silver, if you had any, at 50.01 cents an ounce; freshly-minted silver to be bought for 64 cents an ounce. Everybody said, "three rousing cheers," and started to give them, when suddenly the news came that only enough silver certificates, paper representing silver, would be issued to supply the actual amount needed to pay for silver bought.

The country needs more money, hopes to have it. Perhaps the tumbler pigeon policy will have its day and pass, and the government will decide on what it really intends to do.

LITTLE NORA RUTH NICIFOROS may with confidence recite the prayer: "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those that trespass against us." Because she had been disobedient, her mother, as shown in court, held the six-year-old child's fingers over a gas flame, "burning them severely." The child's mother, sentenced to 35 days in jail, was freed when the little girl told the judge:

"I love my mommy. I was a bad, bad girl and picked things up after she told me not to. She never was mean to me before."

It is to be hoped that the mother will never be "mean" to her again.

RAYMOND HOOD, able architect, who died yesterday of arthritis, was a builder of skyscrapers, and when a "conservative architect" told him that his latest skyscraper was "not architecture," Mr. Hood wisely answered: "So much the better." He believed in new things.

He was last employed on Rockefeller Center, towering toward the skies in the heart of New York City.

WHAT SORT of buildings and architecture does he find in the eternal city that he now inhabits? How tall are those "many mansions" that are in "my father's house?" You could not make a field mouse understand the height of the Eiffel Tower, even if he lived in it. The greatest of earthly architects could not understand or realize the grandeur of structures that exist in distant, infinite space.

THE SAN FRANCISCO Chamber of Commerce reasonably objects to removal of the government's gold from California to Colorado, with "earthquake hazard" offered as an excuse. California wonders if the government's real reason was fear of attack from across the Pacific, why it does not say so. It also wonders why the government does not do better and provide for the country such a fighting air fleet and submarine fleet as would make any attack from across the Pacific or Atlantic preposterous.

GOVERNMENT SAYS it will "bar profiteering" on food following the drought. Many administrations have said that, many times, but there is no "bar."

Where there is a scarcity, there will be profiteering, and there is a scarcity. Secretary Wallace says it will increase the cost of living six to seven per cent next winter.

GOERING CRASH HINTS OF PLOT

International News Service.

MUNICH, Aug. 15.—Possibility that the collision between the car driven by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and Hitler's right-hand man, and a truck in the Bavarian Alps last night was not accidental was being investigated today.

ing investigated by the secret police today.

While Goering was recovering from minor injuries at his chalet in Obersaltzburg secret police were questioning the truck driver.

An element of mystery was added to the accident when a young woman was brought to the same hospital where Goering's wounds were dressed, suffering from bruises. It was reported but not confirmed that she was in the car with the Prussian Premier.

Goering was driving from Munich to Berchtesgaden to see Hitler and had just passed the top of a hill when he found his path blocked by a car passing a truck.

French Reds Warn That Japs Plan War

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(INS.)—"Japan Decides Upon War," is the headline today for the leading article in "Humanitie," official organ of the Communist party. The article is in the form of a warning to the workers that "Japan does not wish to delay any more. She is hurling herself into the adventure."

RANSOM DEADLINE PASSED IN KIDNAPING

'HONEST COP' FOUND DEAD BY BULLET

Ex-Inspector Barry's Wife Discovers Body, Rifle By Side

John Barry, the former police inspector, was found shot dead today.

The veteran police officer, known as "an honest cop", was found by his wife on the floor of the little garage in the rear of their home at 305 Halket street, Oakland.

Hysterical, she ran from the garage shouting:

"Brophy! Brophy!"

She was yelling to Edward J. Brophy, the former police superintendent who has made his home with the Barrys for years.

The quiet, courteous police officer presumably was dead when his wife walked into the garage.

He lay on his back, a four-foot 32-20 Marlin repeating rifle at his feet.

The bullet had entered the left temple, cut through the right ear and imbedded itself in a door of the garage.

Brophy, stunned by the death of the man who had been a lifelong friend and fellow-worker, said that the shooting was, in his mind, accidental.

ON FISHING TRIP

Barry had returned at 6 o'clock this morning with Clyde Edeburn, Elmer Henry and Murray Edlis, all former policemen, from a 10-day fishing trip near Oil City.

He slept until 11 o'clock, then told Brophy he wanted to unload his car and go downtown.

He went to the garage for his stuff.

Brophy's theory is that his friend was taking the baggage from the car when the rifle slipped, hit the cement floor of the garage and discharged.

Nobody seemed to have heard the shot.

Mrs. Barry went to the garage to help her husband.

Batteries—Fitzsimmons and Mancuso; French and Grace.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

FORBES FIELD, Aug. 15.—The Pirates and Giants had scarcely started their scheduled doubleheader at Forbes Field this afternoon when a heavy low cloud let loose a deluge of rain accompanied by darkness. Umpire-in-Chief Barr started the game in partial darkness, but he had to call it before the first half of the first inning was over.

Despite the threatening weather there were about 12,000 people in the stands when the battle began. Officials were ready for the largest crowd of the season at Forbes Field.

When Larry French and Fred Fitzsimmons stepped to the practice mound it was apparent that the rain was not far off. Joe Moore greeted French with a single as the bargain bill got under way. Paul Waner came in

Saved From River

BETTY QUIVEY, 15

2 GIRLS SAVED AS MAN DROWNS

BEAVER, Pa., Aug. 15.—The two girls screamed.

Seconds before they had been laughing in their excitement as they rode the waves in their motorboat trailing the packet Liberty on the Ohio.

Their boat overturned.

Betty Quivey, 15, of Rochester, her cousin, Peggy Anderson, 15, and her uncle, Alfred Woods, 39, of Monaca, were hurled into the water.

Miss Anderson

Woods, who couldn't swim, grabbed his niece frantically.

Both seemed destined to drown.

Betty, a good swimmer, begged her uncle to release her. Immediately he let go, choking out:

"I can't swim; I'm going, Betty."

He sank.

Betty and her cousin were exhausted when C. W. Dalzell, of Monaca, and Gus Mawson, of Rochester, finally rescued them in a rowboat.

Pope Prays for Duce, Archbishop Reports

BUS BATTLE DODGED BY M'NAIR

Tries Mustache Again, Hints New Job For Moritz

To his never-ending and unpredictable life story His Honor the Mayor today added these chapters:

He failed to make good on his threat to board a Pittsburgh Motor Coach bus and ride for 15 cents instead of the customary 25-cent fare.

He persisted in calling a special meeting of Council, most of whose members are on vacation, for tomorrow to confirm the appointment of Ward Bonsall as City Solicitor.

He was reported ready to startle the citizenry once more by giving Theodore L. Moritz, that man of many jobs, still another one—that of assistant city solicitor.

His whimsical mustache was reported in the throes of re-sprouting, despite objections.

He trips of to a preview of a movie and enjoyed seeing a reformed mayor giving the politicians nothing but headaches.

William Nissley McNair was shaving in his Sheridan avenue home today when the first Highland Park bus sped by.

He missed the second one, too. He missed the third one.

And this was the day on which he had promised to energize his protest against the 25-cent bus fare by surrounding himself with a half-dozen of the city's mounted police, boarding a bus, dropping in 15 cents and enjoying a bargain ride.

He did nothing of the sort.

LEAVES ON TOUR

He explained that he had discovered that Council first must pass an ordinance supporting his stand on the matter.

But there was one bus the Mayor did board—and it was a Pittsburgh Motor Coach bus, chartered by the Chamber of Commerce.

The bus drew up to His Honor's home, the Mayor hopped on and PARIS, Aug. 15.—The friendly attention which the Prince of Wales has been paying the American-born Mrs. Ernst A. Simpson, at Biarritz, is giving international society both there and in Paris something to romanticize about.

Mrs. Simpson was more or less the guest of honor yesterday at a cocktail party the Prince gave at his villa, Monte Mer, at Biarritz.

Day before yesterday the Prince was observed waiting half an hour at a Biarritz coiffeur's while Mrs. Simpson had her beautiful auburn hair curled.

And on Sunday, Mrs. Simpson—who was Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, and is listed in the New York social register — was the cynosure of all eyes when she appeared with the heir to the British throne at Chambre d'Amour (House of Love) beach swimming pool.

She looked ravishing in a yellow blouse and brilliant red skirt with large black and white diagonal stripes. To make the symphony complete the Prince was in a yellow shirt, white flannels and striped sandals and was carrying a beach bag that matched Mrs. Simpson's skirt.

Mrs. Simpson resides in London.

Western Forests Swept By Flames

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Great clouds of smoke from several sections of Central Idaho and from the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming, indicated today that raging forest fires had not yielded to armies of fighting men.

Fanned by the wind, a lightning-set fire raged up Tejon Pass in the Jackson Hole country. Approximately 4,000 men were on the fire lines in the Selway and Clearwater forests of Central Idaho.

A Criticism and a Creed

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has a complicated and highly technical job to perform.

We all want to help him in every way.

The question merely is, what is the best way to help him?

There are perhaps two ways:

One way is to approve everything that he does regardless of whether we believe it to be right or wrong.

The other way is heartily to applaud everything we think is beneficial, but to debate policies we believe to be harmful and try logically to convince him that he should pursue a different course.

There is something to be said in favor of either way of helping Mr. Roosevelt, but for a newspaperman it would seem that the only honest way is the second way, the discriminating way.

MR. ROOSEVELT may not pay a great deal of attention to the newspapers, but he may pay some attention to them.

And if the newspapers mislead him they are not helping him, and what is even more important, not helping the country.

There can be no proper question of Mr. Roosevelt's purposes. The only intelligent criticism would be of his methods.

Is he taking the right way to put his good intentions into practical operation?

To begin with, has he the right kind of sound and sincere, capable and experienced men around him?

IF YOU are ill, you get the best and most practical doctor or surgeon that you can find.

If you want your house strengthened or beautified, you get the most competent and experienced architect or engineer that you can find.

If you even want your plumbing attended to, or your dog doctored, you get competent and experienced people to do it.

Why not apply that principle to politics?

Why call in a lot of visionary theorists and let them experiment with serious situations?

Why say, "Well, if these plans do not work, we will try some others?"

Are the other plans to be furnished by the same visionary theorists?

We cannot experiment too much with ANY important situation.

We cannot be like the aviator who bought a parachute.

"Suppose this blame thing doesn't work?" said he.

"Oh, bring it back and we will give you another," replied the seller.

We cannot always bring the parachute back.

We are not always in a position to try "some other plan."

IF INEXPERIENCED surgeons cut off the wrong leg, they may be willing to try another experiment on the other leg, but that does not help us much, or give us our legs back.

Moreover, at the rate our government is dissipating the country's resources and putting us into debt, we will not be able to try another and more practicable plan.

After the visionary theorists have exhausted our Treasury and destroyed our credit, we will have to spend the rest of our lives paying for their failure.

A practical plan NOW is what we want—not a lot of visionary theories now, and a practicable plan when it is too late.

And you men who are working on the roads need the practicable plan for PERMANENT benefit as much as the businessmen do.

President Roosevelt's illustrious namesake and predecessor once wrote to a captain of industry:

"You and I are practical men."

There was no just criticism of that expression, no proper complaint of the idea it conveyed.

We all want practical men at the head of business and industry and particularly at the head of the nation's business.

We want honest men but practical men.

We want practicable plans for the conduct of the nation's affairs and for the improvement of our individual conditions.

WHAT do we mean by a practicable plan?

According to the dictionary, "practicable" means "workable."

That is what we need—not visionary and sometimes revolutionary theories—not impracticable

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Ontario, Aug. 15.—(ENS.)—A note, believed to be authentic, from John S. Labatt, kidnaped wealthy London brewer, was received here today by members of the Labatt family, it was disclosed late today. The note read:

"Do everything possible to aid my release and obey the orders given."

The note was signed "John Labatt," and members of the family, it was stated, expressed belief the signature and handwriting were genuine.

LONDON, Ontario, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The time limit set in the $150,000 ransom note that threatened death to John S. Labatt, kidnaped brewer, was reached this afternoon with police still apparently without a clue which would lead to his rescue.

Twenty-four hours after the abandoned Labatt automobile had been found in London, with a note from "Three-Fingered Abe" demanding $150,000 within 24 hours, police were still without a trace of the men who carried out the first Canadian kidnaping for ransom.

Provincial and local police, aided by the Royal Canadian Mounted, were searching the countryside along the road between Barnia and London, where the wealthy Labatt vanished while on a 30-mile motor trip.

POLICE MYSTIFIED

They established only that the 50-year-old sportsman, who had been under a physician's care, traveled 10 miles from Barnia before disappearing.

Much of the activity in connection with the case was centered in Toronto where Labatt's brother,

OHIO REJECTS NEW DEALERS

International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 15.—Turning their backs on the two candidates who had pledged themselves to support President Roosevelt's New Deal, Ohio voters at their primary election nominated "Honest Vic" Donahey, three times governor and a veteran politician, as the Democratic candidate for United States Senator from Ohio, returns showed today.

Donahey, who did little campaigning, walked away with the nomination in the contest against Gov. George White and youthful Congressman Charles West. The latter had the indorsement of United States Senator Robert Bulkley, a Democrat, and former Gov. James M. Cox, a close confidant of the President. However, White, too, had pledged himself to support Roosevelt.

The contest for the Republican nomination for senator was a walkaway for 73-year-old Senator Simeon D. Fess. He outdistanced his opponents so that they held no hope of the nomination two hours after the counting of ballots started.

Returns from 7,668 of the state's 8,552 precincts showed: Donahey

Quintuplets' Home Under Close Guard

CALLANDER, Ont., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Every precaution is being taken by the authorities to guard against prowlers or other unwanted visitors at the cottage house of the famous 79-day-old Dionne quintuplets.

The little frame home was illuminated last night, and an all-night vigil was maintained as usual by a special guard. Four gasoline lanterns hung from the corners of the home.

Wagon Wheels? Ha! Ha! Ask These Firemen

Homeville Volunteer Firemen are going to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the company next month, but they won't be able to parade with their ancient hose cart, relic of oldtime fire-fighting days.

The reason:

Some one has stolen the two wheels from the cart, it was discovered today.

The wheels were taken from the fire house, situated three blocks from the police station.

It's a perfectly good police station, but there are no police in it because Homeville is in the throes of an economy drive.

SILENCE CLOAKS BUTLER HOME AS STATE OPENS PROBE

INVESTIGATION LULLS AFTER BRIEF VISIT

State More Interested In Institutions Than Inmates, Aide Says

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 15.—The Butler County Home, scene of alleged acts of brutality which last week resulted in suspension of Supt. Fred C. Herold, today entered a new era of enforced silence.

Meanwhile, activity in the State Welfare Department's investigation of conditions there lulled after only three hours' inspection yesterday by Mrs. Isabel F. Pelly, state investigator, as she turned to the business of making annual visitations to other institutions in Butler County.

Asked her opinion of reported cruelties alleged to have been perpetrated by Herold, Mrs. Pelly explained that her investigation concerned only the poor farm and not "any individuals," and that the investigation is merely the Welfare Department's annual visitation, scheduled earlier than usual in deference to County Commissioners' request for a state probe.

She said:

"Our interest in the county home does not extend any farther than to see that inmates are properly cared for, receive "good food and so on."

Scheduled irregularly, the "probe" will comprise only part of her activities while here, she said, with visits to the institution subject to time allotted other annual inspections in this district.

SILENCE DESCENDS

Silence again descended on the home last night when efforts to verify reports that Herold and his wife are staying at the institution were balked by J. C. Barr, county auditor named acting superintendent at the time of Herold's suspension.

It was learned, however, that the Heroids are remaining on the institution premises. Herold is under $1,000 bond on charges of assault and battery filed by A. W. Bortmess, 84, and Peter Z. Ross, 63, inmates of the farm, who said they had been beaten by Herold and thrown into the farm "jail," devised by the ousted superintendent.

PRINCE BURIED FROM GARAGE

POERTSCHACH - ON-WOERTHER SEE, Austria, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Don Gonzalo, fourth son of Alfonso and Victoria, former rulers of Spain, was laid to rest today in a small cemetery in this Carinthian summer resort. Interment was temporary against the day when his body shall finally be buried in Spain.

Funeral services for the 19-year-old prince, who died Sunday following an automobile accident, were held in the villa's garage, which was transformed into a chapel.

After the ceremony the plain wooden coffin, decorated with wreaths from President Miklas of Austria, Premier Mussolini of Italy, and the former Empress Zita of Austria, was lifted into an automobile and carried slowly to the cemetery.

Behind the automobile walked Alfonso and Victoria, dressed in deep black. They walked side by side for more than an hour to the distant mountain burial ground.

Youth No Bar To Senate, Says Holt

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Rush D. Holt believes a "Roosevelt Senate" will treat him as well in the "technical" matter of age as that august body once did Henry Clay.

RUSH D. HOLT

Holt, Democratic nominee for the Senate from West Virginia, is only 29. The age limit for senators set by the constitution is 30 and Holt will not see his next birthday until June 19, 1935.

But today he termed that a "technicality" and said if the voters choose him over Senator Henry D. Hatfield, Republican, he thinks he will take the oath when Congress convenes again in January. Henry Clay, of Kentucky, was seated when he lacked a few months of being 30.

MRS. GARAVINI ASKS PROPERTY

The red-headed widow of Andy Garavini, hacker slain by "Iggie" Schwartz, bookie and former husband of Mrs. Garavini, today filed a petition for a widow's exemption before Judge Thomas P. Trimble in Orphans Court.

She asked that real estate not in excess of $5,000 be set aside for her and that Judge Trimble make an order giving her an exemption of $500 on her proper interest in the estate.

Judge Trimble set a hearing for September 28.

Garavini died without a will. Under the law his widow is entitled to half the estate.

Garavini's sister, Mrs. Ida Garavini Egidi, and two brothers, Vittorio and Umberto, all of whom live in Rome, are making a claim on the estate.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

George Bernard Shaw, speaking at the Malvern festival, said:

"I can produce literature and I can produce drama. I am a playwright and a great many things as well. But I cannot tell you how it is done.

"With me, the thing happens, and I no more bother about how it happens or why it happens than I bother about how I breathe or digest my food—if I do.

"My method, system and tradition is founded upon music. It is not founded on literature at all. I was brought up on music when young. I did not read plays very much because I couldn't get hold of them, except of course Shakespeare, who was mother's milk to me.

"If you will study operas and symphonies you will find a useful clue to my particular type of writing."

NEW 'TRAGEDY' CLUES HINTED

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 15.—The commonwealth does not intend to depend entirely upon the signed statements of Bobby Edwards that he bludgeoned Freda McKechnie to death in an "American tragedy" slaying to clear the path for his newer love, in its efforts to obtain his conviction for murder.

This much was learned today when subordinates in the office of District Attorney Thomas M. Lewis revealed that a list of witnesses has been prepared to give testimony before the grand jury, which convenes next Monday to consider the Edwards case and 1,000 others.

Names of the witnesses and the purport of their testimony could not be obtained, but it was indicated that the witnesses include other persons in addition to routine police officers who will be called to tell the circumstances of Bobby's confession.

YOUNG MOTHER MAY TURN ON MRS. COO

Offer of Immunity in Murder of Cripple Believed Made

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The prosecution prepared to open its attack today in an attempt to send Mrs. Eva Coo to the electric chair for the murder of Harry Wright near a bat-infested farmhouse on Crumhorn Mountain.

With nine jurors seated, District Attorney Donald H. Gravit hoped to see a full jury drawn so he might get the trial of the buxom blonde innkeeper under way before nightfall.

He refused to comment on reports Mrs. Martha Clift, 27-year-old mother, had been offered immunity to turn state's witness against her friend, Mrs. Coo. Mrs. Clift also is charged with the murder, which the state contends was committed to collect $12,900 insurance.

ANTONIO CASE LINKED

The jurors, farmers and laborers, were drawn slowly from a panel of 200 Otsego County folk. Fresh in the minds of many of them were the executions six days ago of Mrs. Anna Antonio, of Albany, and two men she hired to kill her husband for his $5,000 insurance.

Other factors besides the recent Antonio case hung an air of excitement over the courthouse beside Otsego Lake—the "Glimmerglass" of James Fenimore Cooper's Indian tales. The nature of the crime itself—a hobbling, prematurely aged man hit on the head with a mallet, thrust in front of a woman's juggernaut.

Prosecution witnesses will outline the state's contention—that a woman was at the wheel of the automobile the night of June 14 when it thumped over the crumpling form, reversed, and ran backward over it again. Wright, 49, was about to be thrown into the back seat when another car came up the lonely road on Crumhorn Mountain.

DISCOVERY BALKED

The owners of the abandoned farmhouse, hearing that another car had been about, were coming to see. They saw the other car's headlights flash on. Not suspecting that the car stood over a man's body, they turned and went back.

Eight major questions await the witnesses to be called by Grant and by defense counsel, James J. Bayard, Jr., and Everett B. Holmes:

1—Was Mrs. Coo the woman at the wheel? Or, did Mrs. Clift drive the car while Mrs. Coo struck Wright down?

2—What prompted Trooper W. E. Cadwell to make a trip over the mountain road and discover Wright's body in a ditch near the Coo tavern?

3—Is the state's contention true that Mrs. Coo held insurance policies on five persons, including Wright, Mrs. Clift and one of the Clift children?

4—What happened on the midnight trip taken by a group of officals to the murder scene several nights after the crime?

5—What did counsel for Mrs. Coo learn when Wright's body was taken from its grave for examination last Saturday?

6—Why did Wright have Mrs. Coo's name carved on his family tomb before his death?

7—Did Harry Nabinger, who, like Wright, boarded at the Coo tavern, know he had been insured by Mrs. Coo?

8—Who is Mrs. Coo? Since her arrest she has declined to answer questions about her family. One report is she once lived on a farm in Manitoba.

Harry Wright was the first man murdered in hilly Ostego County in many years. One of the coolest of all is the blonde-haired innkeeper herself. In becoming brown clothes, she sits with her lawyer.

GUARD WOMEN AS 'PHANTOM' ESCAPES

Vigilantes Press Hunt For Defiance, O. Slasher

DEFIANCE, O., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Defiance women, not knowing who might be the eighth victim of the phantom knife-wielder who stabbed Miss Mabel Krotz, middle-aged spinster, in the arm early yesterday in his latest appearance, walked the streets warily today.

Only the most stout-hearted left their homes last night without escorts and many remained behind locked doors, for in two of the six attacks over the last two months, the young maniac has invaded homes.

Meantime, police and 100 vigilantes who failed in their efforts to trap the elusive lunatic in a cornfield, after yesterday's attack, remained alert, listening for the wildcat factory whistle which is the signal for mobilization.

Each vigilante has been assigned a post according to the location of attack. Blasts of the whistle will indicate whether the latest attack is in the First, Second, Third or Fourth ward. Following this information the vigilantes, mostly Legionnaires, will proceed immediately to blockade that entire section of town and commence a systematic manhunt throughout the area.

Led by Chief Carl A. Weaner, police today combed the town for strangers. Four youths who could not account for their early morning actions were paraded before some of the seven victims. None of them was identified. Police also made an inspection of Defiance's CCC camp, but this proved a fruitless hunt.

The reign of terror started May 30. Since then there have been six attacks, in which seven women have been wounded. Miss Rosemary Mansfield, Mrs. C. R. Williams, Mrs. Ethel Ansley and Miss Mabel Krotz were stabbed; Mrs. Frank Bentley shot in leg, and Mrs. Henry Hasch and Miss Kathleen Parret clubbed.

RANSOM READY IN KIDNAPING

Hugh, was in conference with police officers and others.

He said no ransom had been paid, although it was reported from other sources that the sum demanded was withdrawn from a London bank and taken to Toronto by Hugh Labatt.

Vincent T. Foley, London attorney, acting as spokesman for the family, said the Labatts ignored the orders in the ransom note and appealed for co-operation to the Canadian authorities, the United States Department of Justice and the Detroit police.

Foley would not reveal the entire contents of the note, but remarked that they were "so fantastic as to be almost unbelievable."

WILLING TO PAY

The lawyer said that the family was willing to pay the $150,000 demanded, confirming the earlier actions.

Uneasiness grew in the Labatt home as hours passed without word from the kidnaped man.

Mrs. John Labatt, mother of the brewer, is in poor health, as is his wife, whose third child was born four months ago.

The family expressed concern because Labatt has a weak heart and has been under treatment recently. He has been on a special diet for some time.

A roundup by police of various suspects brought no results. Scores of automobiles were halted on the highways, but yielded no clue.

Police are investigating the activities of a former employe of the brewery which Labatt heads. The man has not been seen since he quit and police believe he is now identified with a band of liquor smugglers.

Gangsters from the United States are also suspected, authorities believing the federal drive in that country against kidnapers has driven them to Canada. They pointed to half a dozen bank robberies in Ontario in the past two months.

TRIBUTE PAID DR. TURNER AT FAREWELL

Alumni and Faculty, Labor and Civic Leaders Attend

The transformation of the old into the new—and the necessity of the liberal examining the good and evil of it—were stressed by Dr. Turner, ousted Pitt professor of history, who was given a farewell dinner last night in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Friends presented the educator and author a traveling bag.

Speakers included Norbert Fitzgerald, of Erie, former member of the Legislature; John J. Kane, city councilman; Mrs. Ludwig Meyer, of Erie; H. L. Woodmansee, secretary of the Central Labor Union; King Duerr and Harold Ruttenburg, former students of Dr. Turner, and Prof. H. B. Hovde, associate professor of history at Pitt.

LINKS OUSTER 'CAUSE'

Fitzgerald attributed the dismissal of Dr. Turner at the university to his activity in publishing the records of the members of the Legislature. He pointed to the words on the seal of Pennsylvania as:

"Liberty, Virtue and Independence. And for these I have no further comment."

Councilman Kane asserted that the idea of a university is to teach "how to think" and not "what to think." He added:

"It seems that the heads of some universities think more of teaching what to think than how to think. These are behind the times. The people who slave to get their children an education that they might better fight the economic battle want their children to learn how to think. And the people are thinking.

"The heads of such universities are making a mistake. They still think that football teams make great universities. But they will learn, I hope, that great teachers make great universities."

BACKS NEW DEAL

Dr. Turner described the changes that have occurred as an aftermath of the 17 great revolutions since 1914. He said that previously people had the vision and good intentions for society, but now, in addition, they have the material wealth to extend the services to humanity.

Terming the World War and depression two of the world's greatest disasters, Dr. Turner urged liberals to support the Roosevelt program and also criticize it.

'TREATY' NAVY BIDS OPENED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Before the naval high command, Secretary Swanson today opened bids for construction of the first fighting craft under the program to raise the Navy to full treaty power.

Under this year's construction program, 24 ships will be laid down. Proposals from private yards were opened today for the building of half of these, including two cruisers, seven destroyers and three submarines.

Estimates from the Navy yards which will construct the remaining dozen were held confidential and were not opened publicly.

Tempus Fugit! But Habits Linger on

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 15.—Even if this is an age of streamlined automobiles, airplanes and radios, boys evidently haven't changed much since the horse and buggy era when Dad was still a youngster.

Farmers coming to the local curb market complain that the only difficulty they experience is in boys stealing the corn silk from roasting ears displayed there in order to "roll their own" cigarets.

MELLON BUYS RAPHAEL 'MADONNA'

$1,500,000 Reported Paid

Andrew W. Mellon has purchased Raphael's "Alba Madonna" from the Soviet government for $1,500,000 the largest sum ever paid for a work of art, dispatches from Paris reported today.

The picture is known as the Alba Madonna because it was once owned by the Spanish Duke D'Alba, has been regarded by critics as the best of four examples of Raphael's work in the Hermitage Museum at Leningrad.

Several years ago there were persistent reports that Mellon had acquired several of these paintings and had brought them to America where they are supposed to have been in storage in Washington vaults. While the art world has generally believed that Mellon owns these paintings, the former Secretary of the Treasury would not confirm the purchases. Mr. Mellon is now in England or Scotland.

THE RAPHAEL MADONNA, PAINTED IN THE 1500'S, ONCE DUKE D'ALBA'S

The Raphael Madonna portrays the Virgin Mary in a wooded setting, holding the Christ child on her knee, accepting a cross from St. John. It was painted sometime after 1508.

Among Mellon's other famous works in his choice collection are five Rembrandts, numerous old English works, many primitive art pieces, which make his collection one of the rarest if not the largest in the country.

LaGuardia Leads Band-- And Is He a Maestro!

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The Mayor has become, amid great applause, a maestro.

With the wave of a wand in the music grove of Prospect Park last night, Fiorello LaGuardia became probably the first and only—and maybe the last—bandmaster-mayor in the United States.

Twelve thousand persons heard his interpretation of Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," with the Edwin Franko Goldman Band doing the playing, and the cheering was terrific and prolonged. Mr. LaGuardia, whose list of "M" titles now is major-mayor-maestro, functioned so well, indeed, that he was recalled for bows.

To the average ear, Maestro LaGuardia's reading of the Sousa score was entirely satisfying. He got the boys off practically simultaneously, and he held them in tempo with a vigorous up-and-down beat, such as Sousa himself used to employ. If anything, the Mayor was more enthusiastic at his chore, and the musicians forgot any personal political differences that they may have had with the Mayor, and gave wholeheartedly of their lung reserve.

One spectator, presumably a Tammany spy, quibbled over the Mayor's handling of some of the passages, sneering at use of the left hand to obtain certain pianissimo effects, but this was obviously nothing more than an attempt to drag a political herring across the Mayor's musical trail.

GIRL, 15, SAD OVER LOVE, PLUNGES TO DEATH FROM BRIDGE

SISTIE AND BUZZIE DALL JUST PAIR OF INDIANS ON VACATION IN WOODS

Granddaughter of Roosevelts Swims, But Her Brother Sits and Whittles

SAYNER, Wis., Aug. 15—Little "Sistie" Dall is "having a lot of fun" up here in the heart of the North woods, Wisconsin's vacation land.

She said to herself... And her happy smiles, cheerful chatter and golden sunburn make you doubly sure.

CURTIS DALL
Master Curtis—"Buzzie"—pictured just a week ago.

At the W. R. Wilmot lodge on Plum Island, one of the three small islets dotting Plum Lake a mile east of here, "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, grandchildren of President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, have been vacationing for the past 30 days with their father, Curtis B. Dall.

Everyone knows, of course, that "Sistie" is Ann Eleanor Dall, and "Buzzie" is Curtis. But they are better known by their childish nicknames.

Despite precautions taken by their father and secret service men to keep visitors from the island, this reporter succeeded in talking to "Sistie" and seeing both children.

ISLAND GUARDED

Heretofore, all boats approaching the island have been met by these same secret service men who have refused all permission to land. Yesterday, however, the reporter's boat landed at the dock in front of the lodge—a dock seldom used because of the low water which prevents boats being rowed to it.

No one was about, so the reporter walked through the thick trees to the lodge. Her knock at the door brought an Indian woman, wearing picturesque moccasins. She in turn, called Mrs. Wilmot, a gracious, slender, white-haired woman of New Orleans, displaying all the courtesy of the old South.

It was Mrs. Wilmot who led the way to "Sistie," sitting cross-legged on the back porch of the lodge with another little girl, happily playing with two tiny gray kittens. "Sistie" looked.

Stooping down, "Sistie" scooped up the tiny kitten and extended it to her visitor, just as any other little girl would do.

"PLAIN LITTLE GIRL"

It was evident that "Sistie" is being just "plain little girl," instead of the "first grandchild" of the nation on this vacation, for instead of fussy, frilly frocks which might be expected, she wore an Indian playsuit—little trousers with gay red fringe at the sides, and a little short jacket with bright red and yellow trim.

"Sistie" said:

"Oh, I'm having such a good time. I like it here very much."

But "Sistie" is bothered. Her vacation in Wisconsin is soon to end—and she isn't happy about it. She said:

"I'd like to stay ever so long. It's such fun. We swim—I can swim good, but 'Buzzie' can't swim yet. He's too little. But he'll learn. And I play, and I go out in the boats—and, oh, I just play and have lots of fun."

"Buzzie," meanwhile, was seated some 30 feet away, in the back yard of the lodge. A busy little fellow he was, dressed in a tan playsuit, watching while one of the Secret Service men carved a boat for him out of a piece of wood.

"Buzzie" is just as brown as "Sistie," and apparently as happy.

HITLER LAUDED BY HINDENBURG IN DEATH

'Political Will' of Dead Leader Adds to Nazi Power

BERLIN, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The dead hand of Reichspresident Paul von Hindenburg was brought today into Chancellor Hitler's campaign for a renewed expression of popular approval through a declaration giving dignified but unmistakable recognition to "the decisive stride" led by Hitler in the upward struggle of the German people.

The aged field marshal wrote in a "political will," signed May 11 and published today, after Franz von Papen had delivered it to Hitler:

"I thank Providence for permitting me to see in the evening of my life the hour of recovery."

The document was carried to the Chancellor by von Papen, who stopped at Hitler's summer home at Berchtesgaden on his way to become minister to Austria. The testament read:

"I thank all those who in unselfish love of the fatherland have co-operated in the work of Germany's resurgence.

"My Chancellor, Adolf Hitler, and his movement have taken a decisive stride of historical importance toward the great goal of leading the German people to inner unity."

The concluding paragraph says:

"I know much remains to be done and from the bottom of my heart wish the act of national regeneration and unification may be followed by an act of reconciliation to embrace the whole German fatherland."

The testament was enclosed in an envelope sealed by the Reichspresident himself, and bearing the words:

"To the German people and their Chancellor. My testament. This letter is to be transmitted to the Reichskanzler by my son."

In accordance with these instructions, Col. Oskar von Hindenburg, son of the Reichspresident, commissioned von Papen, who was von Hindenburg's close friend, to deliver the document to Hitler.

The Last Salute to a Hero

The impressive scenes in Bavaria and East Prussia as Germany, led by Reichskanzler Hitler, hoisted its great hero, President-Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg. From his little house in Neudeck to massive Tannenberg, the fortress-like memorial at the scene of his greatest World War victory, thousands stood while his coffin passed over a bumping caisson.

'I'LL LOVE YOU ALWAYS,' SHE PENS BOY

Wriggles From Grasp of Rescuers; Falls To Doom

At the tender age of 15, Anna Storos, alias Anna Martin, found love's disappointments too great to bear, and today she lay dead by her own hand to fulfill her vow to kill herself.

This pathetic note, written to a girl friend, told Anna's story:

"Good by, Angie. I'll always love you. Anna. P. S.—I'm sorry we couldn't go on."

The note was left on the Panther Hollow Bridge late yesterday before Anna leaped from the lofty span.

Miss Storos

Developments today indicated that Anna had contemplated the act for some time. Last Friday night she was noticed pacing the bridge in a suspicious manner and was picked up by Radio Car Patrolmen Henry Brush and Thomas Corey.

WALKED OUT ON HER

Today Brush quoted her as having said at that time that she intended to end her life because her boy friend had walked out on her. She was calmed by the officers, but was quoted as having said:

"I'll jump off the bridge yet."

Two men vainly attempted to prevent her death leap yesterday. They are Joseph Donatian, of 1906 Nantasket street, and James Hughes, of 1020 Mirror street, both employed in the Schenley Park conservatory.

But she wriggled from their grasp and plunged from the bridge, her dress tearing as she fell.

NOTE TO BOY FRIEND

The note to the boy friend was one of two left in a letter on the bridge. The letter was addressed to the girl's father, Fred Storos, a miner, of Curtisville. The second note, to a girl friend, read:

"Goodby, Olga. Oh, I forgot, it's still GP to me. And don't forget my birthday that we celebrated together. Anna."

The parents informed deputy coroners that Anna had been living at a rooming house in Forbes street, Oakland.

The landlady said she knew the girl as Anna Martin and that she had been living there with a man she said was her husband.

GARBO PLEASED BY WARM 'RAIN'

CULVER CITY, Cal., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—There was no end of thanks today from Greta Garbo, Swedish movie actress, to her director when she found that imitation rain in a tropical picture in which she is acting surprisingly turned out to be more the temperature of bath water than of real rain.

GRETA GARBO

Miss Garbo has not been feeling so well lately, and has been living in dread of the rain scenes because she is subject to colds. Solicitous of the studio's high-priced investment in Miss Garbo's talent, Director Richard Boleslavsky induced studio engineers to provide warm rain.

Sobs in Grip Of Talking Sickness

MT. GILEAD, O., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Alternately mumbling, sobbing and shouting, a 32-year-old truck driver, Donald Campbell, today began his tenth day in the grip of "talking sickness," an ailment akin to the silent sleeping sickness.

He is lying in the home of his father, Blain Campbell, near here, steadily growing weaker from the drain on his nervous energy.

Dr. C. S. Jackson, who terms his sickness a form of encephalitis, reports the patient remains rational. The disease is believed to result from an infection of the encephalon, or lower part of the brain, but Campbell shows no evidence of mental derangement. He readily recognizes acquaintances and answers questions.

In his rambling monolog, said Dr. Jackson, he passes from an answer to a description of a humorous experience, laughing heartily; then he becomes morose, and his words are spaced by sobs.

Boyhood exploits are mentioned along with worried statements about his job with a Columbus, O., trucking company, and then the patient directs a few words to his wife and small daughter. Worry over his job was said by a physician to have brought on Campbell's illness.

The man has had only five hours sleep since the onset of the disease. Ice packs will be used on the back of his head in an effort to induce rest and sleep.

ANN DVORAK PA LINKED HERE

E. Samuel McKim, reunited yesterday in Hollywood with his daughter, Ann Dvorak, famous film star, after 17 years' separation, today was remembered by Frank Richter, of 210 Market street, as a former Pittsburgher.

Richter, a fellow trouper of McKim's, recalled their experiences in various theaters in and around Pittsburgh. He was a singing comedian. Miss Dvorak, he said, resembles her father.

McKim during his residence in Pittsburgh staged shows for benefits until he became associated with the Powers Company, originators of the old Biograph and Vitaphone motion pictures. His specialty was "Damon and Pythias," which played annually at the Odd Fellows Hall.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Marian Nixon's divorce from the wealthy Eddie Hillman, Hollywood, was final today, but she denied reports she is to marry again soon.

The reports linked the actress' name with that of William Seiter, movie director, who was divorced recently in Riga, Latvia, by Laura LaPlante, another actress, now in England.

The reinstatement of Patrolmen James Hanna, William Dillinger and John Corey, of the Swissvale police, suspended June 17, for "conduct unbecoming an officer," was confirmed by Swissvale Council last night. Dillinger and Corey were reinstated by the police committee two weeks after their suspension. Council denied the recommendation of the committee that Hanna, a former acting lieutenant, be dismissed.

STEEL BOARD HEARS NEW LABOR CASE

The National Steel Labor Board, meeting here today heard a petition of the Canonsburg lodge, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, asking for an election in the mills of the Standard Tin Plate Company at Canonsburg.

Attorney Charlton Ogburn represented the lodge. He claimed that more than 50 per cent of the company's employes were members of the Amalgamated.

The petition presented by Ogburn did not cover the workers in the hot mill department, who already are under contract.

Among those at the hearing were Carle Conway, chairman of the board of the Standard.

The steel board yesterday obtained an agreement between officials of the Apollo Steel Company, Apollo, and the Amalgamated union, whereby an election under the board's supervision will be held August 27, from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

A. M. Oppenheimer, president of the company, agreed to shut the mills down for the day. Those eligible to vote will be regular employes as of June 1.

A committee of five, with a federal mediator chairman to rule on all disputes, will be in charge of the election. Two members will represent the Amalgamated and two the employes' representation plan.

The hearing was the first to be held here by the National Steel Board. Judge Walter P. Stacy, chairman, presided. Admiral H. A. Wiley and Dr. James Mullenbach, the other members, also sat on the dais in a court room of the Federal Building.

The board also expects to hear the case of the West Virginia Rail Company, of Wheeling, tomorrow.

U. S. MEDIATOR COMING HERE

Uncle Sam today pushed efforts to settle the strike at the plants of the Aluminum Company of America.

At Washington labor's side of the controversy was presented to federal officials in a conference at the Labor Department.

Following this meeting it was announced that Fred Keightly, Labor Department conciliator, will leave for Pittsburgh tonight for a conference with Aluminum Company officials.

Keightly heard the union side of the dispute from Boris Shishkin, American Federation of Labor executive, working with the aluminum workers' council. Shishkin, according to the Associated Press, discussed at length the union's demands for reduction of union dues from pay envelopes, a written contract, and a universal wage scale.

Hugh L. Kerwin, the Labor Department's conciliation director attended the conference. After Keightly gets the company's views, he, Kerwin, and the Labor Relations Board, will determine what steps the federal government will take to attempt to arrange a settlement.

TROLLEY WAGE PARLEY ENDING

Unless O. David Zimring, chief union counsel, decides to introduce rebuttal testimony to support union demands for shorter hours and higher pay, arbitration hearings in the wage disputes between the Pittsburgh Railways Company and its 1,800 motormen and conductors may end today. Carl E. Glock, utility counsel, said at adjournment yesterday he had only one or two more witnesses to call.

C. D. Palmer, research engineer for the railways company, testified yesterday that the traction system earned 1.1 per cent return on its allowed valuation in 1933, 1.5 per cent in 1932 and 3.8 per cent in 1931. The company, in the last 10 years, has spent $24,681,882.43 for tracks and roadway and equipment, Palmer said.

MILITIA FIRES ON TRUCK

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—National guardsmen fired their first shot in the current truck drivers strike today when they shot at an automobile which ran through sentry lines about guard headquarters at the downtown armory.

Archie Nadeau, the driver, was arrested when he returned to boast about running the blockade. None was injured, though Nadeau's car was struck twice as it careened through the streets.

Meanwhile, federal mediators advanced a new peace plan.

HEARST LAUDED ON DOPE DRIVE

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15.—Praising the persistent campaign against the illegal use and distribution of narcotic drugs carried on by the Hearst newspapers, Judge Oda Falconer in a radio address declared concerning the narcotic problem:

"The cause is ignorance; the consequences are misery; the only remedy is education.

"Quick information, conveyed to society and everywhere, as to the peril that exists will arouse a motive for self-preservation from which will flow the the best that can be done in laws and salvage.

"William Randolph Hearst, through his newspaper organization, is carrying on the most effective campaign of education regarding drug addiction. I sincerely hope that other publishers will soon become aware of their obligation to the public."

Bad associations, Judge Falconer said, are usually to blame for the development of new addicts.

MEDICINE FIRM HEAD HELD

Alleging that she misbranded medicine sent to different parts of the country by parcel post, Mrs. Katherine Heil Ammon, surviving co-partner of the Home Remedy Company, 1641 Penn avenue, was arrested yesterday on a bench warrant by Deputy United States Marshal Thomas E. Quayle.

She was charged with violating the federal pure food and drug act. The information was signed by Federal Prosecutor H. S. Dumbauld.

Mrs. Ammon was released in $1,000 for her appearance in court.

Lawrenceville Man Faces Dope Charge

Accused of selling narcotics, James J. Hanlon, of 456 Forty-fourth street, is awaiting a hearing before the United States Commissioner. His bond has been set at $1,500. Narcotic agents arrested Hanlon Monday at Fortieth and Butler streets. The agents say that shortly before his arrest he had sold 430 grains of heroin for $40. The retail price for the same quantity of the drug is about $250, narcotic agents say.

Dog Catcher Bitten 6 Times, Gets Dog

W. H. Jones, 33, of 5716 Broad street, a dog catcher for the Animal Rescue League, was bitten six times on the left arm by a stray police dog he captured at Warrington avenue and Millbridge street, late yesterday.

The animal attacked him when he attempted to place it in his wagon. Jones told police. Jones succeeded in getting the dog into the wagon and then went to Mercy Hospital, where the wounds were cauterized.

Playgrounds Lumber Taken by Thieves

South Side police today were seeking thieves who stole a mortar box, a water barrel and 1,000 feet of lumber from the new Monongahela playgrounds on Arlington avenue.

STRIKERS HAIL MRS. PINCHOT

HARRIMAN, Tenn., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—A round of cheers greeted Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, last night when she told a gathering of striking employes of the Harriman Hosiery Mills that "the Blue Eagle has got to be taken away from the Harriman Mills again and I believe A. R. Glancy, of the NRA, has got to go with the Eagle."

Standing on a dimly lighted bandstand in the middle of the city park, Mrs. Pinchot addressed a crowd of 500 men and women, attacking both the management of the mills and the NRA.

Glancy, a field administrator for the NRA, negotiated an agreement with the operators which restored the mill's Blue Eagle some days ago.

Bareheaded and with beads of perspiration pouring from her face, Mrs. Pinchot spoke for more than an hour.

Another speaker was Fred G. Held, vice president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, kidnaped several weeks ago, escorted from town by a group of men and told never to return.

Truck Driver Beaten In Lockout at York

YORK, Pa., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Violence flared for the first time in the York Motor Express Company "lockout" early today and left a Maryland truck driver in a hospital, stripped of his clothes and severely beaten.

Five men, believed to be employes "locked out" by the firm last Sunday night, dragged Roger Grant, of Baltimore, newly employed driver for the trucking firm, from the cab of his loaded vehicle.

PINCHOT RELIEF PLEA DELAYED

HARRISBURG, Aug. 15.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today announced that he had postponed until next week plans for a trip to Washington to make a final appeal to avoid a special session of the Legislature for relief.

The postponement was decided upon when it was learned that Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, will not return to the national capital until next Wednesday.

Gov. Pinchot, in announcing his change of plans, was optimistic about the prospects of a compromise settlement of the state's relief situation without the necessity of a fourth extraordinary legislative session in as many years. He would not discuss, however, what possible compromise may be reached, reiterating for publication merely that he is "doing everything in my power to avoid a session."

5,000 DROPPED FROM RWD

Five thousand men and women, the last of 14,000 employed on Relief Works Division projects in Allegheny County, were dropped from the rolls today, James L. Stuart, County Administrator, announced. Only a few workers were retained to work on projects held up during the past week by heavy storms.

The new program to supercede the RWD will become effective September 15. The RWD workers dropped today and last week will be replaced on the rolls of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board as rapidly as possible, officials announced.

DRESSLER WILL DRAMA TOLD

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Marie Dressler's last will and testament, disposing of her $310,000 estate, was admitted to probate as witnesses to it described her signing of the document while on her death bed.

Alan Breed Walker, the actress' lifelong friend whom she named executor of her estate, said:

"She sat up in bed, took the pen in her fingers, and scratched her sprawling signature."

"Then she twisted up her face, like she did on the screen, and said: 'Well, that's that.'"

"She seemed so cheerful and full of energy, we asked her to autograph some pictures for us. This she did, with the same expression, and the same remark, 'That's that.'"

All witnesses testified Miss Dressler's mind was clear until she slipped into a coma a few weeks before her death last month in Santa Barbara.

Desertion Charged In Divorce Suit

Indignities and desertion are charged by Mrs. Dandridge S. Robertson, 38, of 5704 Elgin street, in her divorce suit, heard yesterday by Attorney D. Albert Mazer, acting as master.

Mrs. Robertson charged that her husband's failure to pay bills resulted in the cutting off of her light, gas and telephone service. She also asserted that her husband had been arrested in Indianapolis on a bad check charge. The couple, married January 6, 1914, has three children.

ROBBED BY MAN HIDING IN AUTO

Joseph R. Hanna, 31, of 316 Coke way, was held up and robbed of $18 by an unidentified Negro last night after he stopped to purchase milk at a dairy on Forbes street.

The bandit hid in his car during Hanna's absence and, upon his return, took the money and a pair of keys from him. He told Hanna the keys would be found several block away.

Hanna later reported to police he found the keys at the spot designated by the man.

CUBAN LEADER DARES BATISTA TO DUEL

HAVANA, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—All Cuba, the interest aroused by the prospect of a duel between two of its most prominent citizens, watched today every development of the controversy between Joaquin Martinez Saenz, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Col. Fulgencio Batista, commander-in-chief of the Cuban army.

Saenz challenged the military leader to fight out on the field of honor deep-seated differences between them.

The nation awaited eagerly for Batista to reply to the challenge. No word came from him early today.

SCHOLAR AGAINST SOLDIER

Saenz is a suave scholar of politics, law and finance. Batista is a rough and ready country boy whose energy and revolutionary fervor lifted him overnight from the post of obscure drill sergeant to military chief of the state.

In a statement bristling with defiance Saenz offered to meet Batista "any place except here, where I might suffer the consequences of your protection, as so many A.B.C. (secret political society) members have."

Nothing since the downfall of President Gerardo Machado a year ago has stirred the fight-loving people of Cuba more than the dispute between the two men who stood side by side in the A.B.C. ranks in the early days of the anti-Machado fight. In that movement they battled valiantly together, both to emerge as important figures of the revolutionary government.

Saenz, in his challenge, said:

"I offer you an opportunity to show your chivalry, not by your own affirmation, but with an action worthy of a gentleman."

The scholarly former secretary specified that a court of honor, composed of seven men, be appointed to witness the duel and to see that the formalities of such encounters are observed. He proposed that three men be named by each combatant, and that these six select the seventh.

IN BLOODLESS DUEL

Cubans recalled that several months ago, while he was Secretary of the Treasury, Saenz fought a duel with Oscar Della Torre, and Cubans wondered whether a meeting between Saenz and Dela Torre, after glaring at each other across 30 paces, both fired pistols into the air. To engage in that fight Saenz temporarily resigned his cabinet post.

In a lengthy statement Saenz charged Batista in numerous statements "resorted to falsehoods" to destroy Saenz' reputation. He declared:

"The Army and the ABC should not fight. This should be settled man to man."

The former secretary charged Batista is disposing of money of the people of Cuba in "fantastic credits which you gulp insatiably to better your armaments as well as your general condition in life."

He charged that Batista lives in a palatial home while soldiers sleep in tumble-down barracks.

VIC DONAHEY, FESS NAMED FOR SENATE

231,101; West 146,801, and White 146,224. Returns from 4,439 precincts in the race for the Republican nomination for the senate revealed: Fess 141,816; and Common Pleas Judge Walter B. Wanamaker, an Akron Progressive 39,853. The other three candidates trailed far behind. "General" Covey, of "Coxey's Army" fame, who also sought the Republican nomination pulled only 17,093 votes.

Martin L. Davey, of Kent, former Congressman, appeared to have the Democratic gubernatorial nomination clinched. His total from 7,668 precincts stood at 196,238, as compared with 171,522 for Lieut. Gov. Charles Sawyer, Cincinnati, and 159,256 for William G. Pickrel, Dayton.

Clarence Brown, former Secretary of State, far outstripped a field of six opponents for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Brown's vote from 7,774 precincts was 309,137, while Daniel F. Morgan, former Cleveland city manager, in second place, had only 149,114.

West, who with White, was defeated in the race for the Democratic senatorial nomination, entered the contest after making a spectacular airplane dash here from Washington. He is 39 years old and a professor of economics at Denison University at Granville, Ohio.

Gov. Bryan Far Behind In Nebraska Race

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 15.—(INS.)—Returns from 60 out-state precincts today gave Congressman E. R. Burke, ardent supporter of the Roosevelt administration, a commanding lead over Gov. Charles W. Bryan in the race for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

The vote, exclusive of Lincoln and Omaha, gave 3,482 for Burke to 1,866 for Gov. Bryan.

Coupled with the lead piled up by Representative Burke in his home city, Omaha, he apparently was the victor.

Burke had the indorsement of Arthur F. Mullen, former National Democratic Committeeman and floor leader for the Roosevelt cause at the 1932 national conveniton.

On the other hand Robert Simmons, former Congressman, an outspoken critic of President Roosevelt's policies, was drawing away from the field on the Republican side of the primary contest, indicating that the November race for the Senate seat will be one of the hottest political fights were in recent years. Simmons was outstripping Robert Smith, K. S. Wherry and Barton Green.

Gov. Futrell Winner At Arkansas Polls

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 15.—(INS.)—With approximately one-fifth of the Democratic primary returns tabulated, Gov. J. M. Futrell, candidate for renomination today was leading Howard Reed, former state comptroller, by a 2-to-1 margin.

Idaho's Governor Leads For Renomination

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Returns from 126 of the 819 precincts in Idaho's primary for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination gave: Gov. C. Ben Ross, 6,190; Frank Martin, 3,411 and Asher B. Wilson, 1,434.

Returns in the Republican primary from the same number of precincts gave: Frank L. Stephan, 3,769; J. Wesley Holden, 2,855, and H. F. Fait, 991.

Wrestler Killed In Primary Quarrel

GALLIPOLIS, O., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Violence blamed on election quarrels flared up in Gallia County today and one man is dead and another may die. Cluster Russell, 32, a constable, was arrested by Sheriff Hatfield at Morgan Center, after he shot and killed Joseph Barrett, 35, an amateur wrestler, who engaged in bouts at county fairs in Ohio and West Virginia.

Two brothers were stabbed in an election quarrel at Crown City.

Body Found in Road; Heart Attack Victim

Morgue officials today found the death of a man, tentatively identified as Andrew Verner, aged 60, discovered on a road near Warrendale early today by a bus driver for the Harmony Bus Company, was due to chronic heart failure.

A Criticism

and sometimes unpatriotic experiments, but homely, American, workaday, workable, practicable plans.

Fantastic innovations are of dubious value.

Good intentions are not sufficient in themselves.

An old proverb says "The road to hell is paved with good intentions."

We may be full of good intentions and still be on the road to hell.

Sometimes it looks as if we were.

The sublime self-confidence and self-satisfaction of the theorists are not altogether reassuring.

They suggest too much the old story of the pilot who took charge of a ship to steer it into a safe harbor.

"Do you know the channel thoroughly?" asked the captain.

"You bet I do," said the pilot. "I know every rock in the harbor."

"There," said he as the ship struck. "There is one of them now."

We don't want a pilot who in supreme self-confidence runs us on the rocks and then is willing to "try another plan."

YOU AND I, fellow citizens, are practical men and we want practical pilots.

We are like the man who was engaging a chauffeur for his automobile.

"How close can you go to the edge of a bridge?" he asked the candidates for the position.

"Oh, within about a foot," said one.

"Maybe within an inch," said another.

"I don't know," said a third. "I always keep on the safe part of a bridge."

"You are engaged," said the owner. "I don't want any chauffeur making dangerous experiments with my property and my life."

Fellow citizens, maybe we, too, want chauffeurs who will stick to the safe part of the bridge—the good old American part which has carried us safely over so many depressions for so many years.

Maybe if we get too close to the experimental edge, we may go ove

ELECTRICIANS AGREE ON PAY

The nation's first National Recovery Administration hearing to establish a wage scale for individual areas was held in Pittsburgh today on the electrical workers' and employers' agreement on a basic scale of $1.50 an hour, and a 40-hour week.

If the proposed agreement is accepted by NRA, the scale and working agreement will apply to all of Allegheny County and part of Westmoreland County.

R. E. Doherty, deputy NRA administrator, presided at the hearing which was marked by only two protests against the agreement.

The plan was proposed jointly by the Electrical Contractors Association of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County Electrical Contractors, the Fixture Dealers and Local Union No. 5, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

It provides besides the $12-a-day wage, 90 cent an hour for four-year apprentices, 80 cents for three-year men and 70 cents for two-year men.

Clear River Captain In Fist-Fight Death

A Coroner's jury today exonerated Capt. John W. Hysmith, of the river steamer Heslop, in the death of Isaiah Porter, 48, Negro, of Robert's Hollow, Elizabeth, July 27. The jury found Porter died of a fractured skull, received in a fall following a blow from Hysmith. Hysmith testified he struck Porter when Porter threatened him. The jury decided it was justifiable homicide in self-defense.

Donahey to Beat Fess, Says Farley

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—(INS.)—Congratulating former Gov. A. V. Donahey, of Ohio, on his victory in the Democratic senatorial primary, Postmaster General Farley today predicted "Honest Vic" would win a similar triumph over Senator Fess, Republican incumbent, in the fall election.

U. S. Industry Must Pa Appalling Tax to Kee Up NRA Bureaucracie

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the third of a series of ar ticles explaining NRA's new tax on American industry fo code enforcement.)

By PHILIP PEARL
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The cost of maintainin bureaucratic experiments is appalling.

NRA is getting the bad news now. At first it estimate the expense of enforcing codes would be less than 50 million dollars a year. Now it appears it will have to tax industry at the rate of 200 million dollars a year to support the code authorities.

The reason for the tremendous discrepancy lies in the unpredictable fungoid growth of NRA's bureaucratic machinery.

Practically every industrial city in the nation now houses a Code Authority, or one of its myriad regional sub-divisions. Each code authority must have offices and a staff of clerks, stenographers and investigators.

The investigators find a code violation. Immediately a complaint is filed against the alleged offender. A hearing is called. Testimony is taken. Let us say the defendant is found guilty. He appeals to the courts. The Code Authority must defend itself.

Multiply this case by hundreds and thousands and an idea is obtainable of the regular, unavoidable cost of everyday code enforcement.

Members of the code authorities are not paid. But frequently they are called upon to make long trips, especially to Washington, for important conferences and hearings. Their railroad fare and hotel expenses must be paid. When one takes into consideration the innumerable hearings which the complexities of NRA regulations have necessitated, the way these costs have mounted is not mystifying.

Now these costs are to be assessed on industry and NRA finds that the job of collecting the money is going to add considerably to the Code Authority expenses.

The task of preparing budgets, figuring out assessments, mailing bills, collecting the money and checking on each member of the industry to prevent evasion will mean the employment of a huge corps of bookkeepers, accounts and more clerks and investigators.

It will cost the federal government more money, too. Because within the offices of the Recovery Administration there has to be set up elaborate machinery to pass on the Code Authority budgets and check their expenditures.

(Although NRA is just starting to collect its tax on industry, complaints already are pouring in. The way in which the tax may result in injustices is explained in the final article in this series tomorrow.)

'BOUNCE' STILL WORRIES FIRST 'GAS BUGGY'S' INVENTOR

'Shaking Back Seat' 43-Year Problem For Duryea

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The" back-seat bounce" is still worrying Charles E. Duryea, inventor of the first "gas buggy."

It's been 43 years since he wheeled the first automobile on to a vacant lot in Springfield, Mass., but he just can't get that bounce out of his mind.

Even at his golden wedding anniversary celebration here, he thought of it.

Put the engine in the rear instead of up front, he said, and the bounce will be gone. He explained:

"With the engine in the rear, the seats would come between the front and rear axle and not over the rear axle as in most modern automobiles."

The engine ought to be in the rear, anyway, the inventor contends. Motors must be simplified, too, he declared; cars must be much lighter, and present designs revolutionized in the next few years.

He's still working on improvements for the automobile, although he's 72.

MR. AND MRS. DURYEA ON THEIR 50TH ANNIVERSARY

The 200 guests at the golden wedding celebration sat im the Tioga Methodist Church and watched lantern slides, taken from the Duryea family album and tracing development of his inventions.

The first "gas buggy," the slides recalled, was a lady's phaeton, equipped with a gasoline engine. Duryea built it in 1891 in Springfield, and tried it out on a vacant lot free both from nervous horses and persons who thought him crazy.

In 1895 the inventor, piloting a car of his own make, won the first American automobile race, at Chicago. The purse was $2,000.

SLOVAK KREPLE HEADS PRIZE RECIPES

By PRUDENCE PENNY

Well, today we have at last that much sought-after recipe for Slovak Kreple. We hope it comes up to the expectations of the reader who so urgently requested it, and are glad that her plea was answered so promptly.

Today's prize-winning recipes include one for Cucumber Fritters which Mrs. Ethel A. Kerr says may be served with or without thick tomato sauce. She says they are very good with plenty of butter.

Mrs. Charlotte Conley says of her Fourteen Day pickles:

"Please pass the pickles, both family and guests plead when I serve them. They are almost transparent, delightfully crisp, with a never-to-be-forgotten flavor. In short, they are everything a sweet pickle should be."

We hope you enjoy all of today's prize-winning recipes. Here they are:

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. ANNA LABIK,
250 South First Street, Duquesne.
SLOVAK KREPLE

To one and one-half cups of flour add a pinch of salt sifted into a deep bowl, one cup lukewarm milk and three-fourths cake of compressed yeast which has been dissolved in one-half cup lukewarm water and one teaspoon sugar. Stir into a dough, cover with a towel and set away in a warm place to rise.

Cream one-half cup of butter, one cup sugar and two tablespoons salt. Add two eggs well beaten, stir well and add the risen dough. Work in gradually five cups of sifted flour and the grated rind of one lemon. Roll the dough until it blisters and leaves the dish perfectly clean at the sides. Let the dough rise slowly for about two hours (all yeast dough is best if it rises slowly). On a large baking board, well floured, roll out the dough one-fourth inch thickness. When all the dough has been rolled and cut, spread beaten egg on the edge of each and fasten (Spread only a few at a time to prevent egg drying). Then put one-half teaspoon of marmalade, jam or jelly on the cake.

Put another cake on top of one already spread. Cut the top cake a little smaller than the one on the bottom. This makes them stick together better and prevents the preserves from coming out while cooking. Set all away on a floured board or pan about two inches apart. Spread the top of each cake with melted butter and let them rise from one to two hours. When ready to fry, heat at least two pounds of lard or any vegetable fat in a deep kettle. Try the fat with a small piece of dough. If it rises immediately, put in the kreple. In putting them in, place the side that is up on the board down in the hot fat. Do not crowd them in the kettle, as they require room to rise and spread. When they are light brown turn them over on the other side and fry till done. When done they will have a white stripe around the center. Take them up with a perforated skimmer, lay on a large platter and sprinkle with pulverized sugar. If fat gets too hot take from the fire a minute. These are best eaten fresh.

The doughnuts may be baked in moderately hot oven and when half done glazed with sugar and white of egg.

Underworld Startles Film Men

By HARRISON CARROLL

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15.—Department of Justice agents here are investigating gangland's latest gesture of bravado—an attempt to sell the life story of

HARRY PIERPONT

Harry Pierpont, convicted Dillinger confederate, for a motion picture scenario.

The extraordinary proposal was made to the Paramount Studio in a letter bearing a Chicago postmark and written by a woman purporting to be the wife of the underworld killer, who is now an occupant of the death house at the Ohio State Penitentiary, awaiting execution for the murder of Sheriff Jesse Sarber.

Even in the old days, no studio would have accepted such an offer. Now, in the midst of the cleanup campaign, gangster stories are anathema.

But the letter didn't find its way to the waste-basket, because Jeff Lazarus, head of the studio story department, was startled to read in one paragraph:

"He (Pierpont) will soon be in a position to do the dickering with you himself."

Scenting a possible escape plot, studio officials promptly turned over the letter to authorities.

SEEK $293,897 FROM STATE

Assistant County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher and County Engineer E. L. Schmidt will try their hand at bill collecting next week. They have been instructed to go to Harrisburg in an effort to collect $293,897.63 from the State Highway Department.

The money is due the county as the state's share in the construction of the Westinghouse Bridge and approaches. The county paid for the improvement and the state was to contribute its share. The total cost was approximately $4,500,000.

In addition the county still owes $198,000 for damages and the state is to pay half of this amount after settlement has been made.

GREAT BEND, Kas., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—John M. Lewis, Pawnee County farmer, is trying to decide whether it is more profitable to raise hogs or dogs.

He took three pups to a farm sale, selling them for $2.70. He turned around and bought five small pigs with the money.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Far East War Scare Started by Japs;; Aids U. S.

ORIENTAL DIPLOMACY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The origin of those recurrent Russo-Japanese war stories has long been a diplomatic secret. You may remember that the Russians were very certain the early part of this year that they would be attacked in April. They even massed troops in readiness.

Mr. Mallon

It can now be disclosed that their information came from the Japanese themselves. The Russian ambassador to Tokio last winter was unable to get any satisfactory information concerning Japanese attitude from Tokio officials, so he decided to go directly to Gen. Araki, leader of the Japanese militarists and the political boss of Japan. He asked Araki directly if he thought war was imminent.

To his amazement, Araki said that war was inevitable and that it would start in April.

BACKGROUND

All information from other sources confirmed this view, so the Russians took Araki at his word and believed him.

The story is being cited by eminent Japanese authorities as proof that the militarists do not always have their way in Tokio. Those who have had experience with oriental diplomacy may draw their own deductions as to Araki's motives.

The incident, however, encourages our best diplomatic authorities to believe that the current Russo-Japanese difficulties over the Manchurian railway are not a harbinger of immediate war, but just a little oriental haggling over price. Most competent authorities here now believe an eventual Russo-Japanese war is inevitable, but they would be surprised if it comes soon.

Meanwhile, our diplomats are secretly half-glad the Far Eastern cauldron is bubbling again.

They will not admit it openly, but they have noted that the Russians come running to us every time the Japanese threaten. Thus it may now have a very beneficial effect on perplexing debt problems which we now have pending with Russia.

AGILITY

The way President Roosevelt squeezed himself shrewdly through the Far Eastern difficulties during his Hawaiian visit is causing his associates to comment again on his political agility.

One pitfall he avoided was dug deliberately by a well-known Chinese political leader. This politician left Shanghai for Honolulu, announcing publicly that he was going to see Mr. Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Avoids Chinese 'Trap' In Hawaii

The sensitive Tokio press played it up big, suspecting it spelled danger for Japan.

When the Chinese arrived at Honolulu, he again announced he would see Mr. Roosevelt, and again the Japanese press boiled.

The presidential party was forewarned against the dangerous diplomatic possibilities of such a meeting, and the Chinese politician was delicately, politely and firmly given the run-around. He never even got near Mr. Roosevelt.

EFFICIENCY

The ways of government are hard to understand.

Consider the situation of an exceptionally able young engineer with 25 years' experience in his line. He wanted a job with the Housing Commission. He had civil service rating and was a war veteran and, therefore, by law, entitled to priority. His political pull was exceptional. He had the indorsement of a cabinet officer and several of the most influential Democratic leaders. He could not have had more pull if Miss Democracy herself had okayed him.

Yet for two weeks he tramped the corridors of the mighty, unable to get even an explanation, and he is still tramping.

It only goes to show what chance an ordinary fellow has to get a government job when a man like that cannot get on.

It also shows confusion and inefficiency in the patronage set-up.

NOTES

A high legal authority in the government recently received an offer of a part-time job teaching law in a part-time law school. He cannot figure out whether it was intended as a compliment to his legal acumen or not. One Congressman was helped to put through that bill permitting Congressmen to borrow from government agencies now wants to rent, to a government farm agency, a large office building which he owns. He believes in helping himself. Mr. Roosevelt was somewhat disconcerted when he heard the Blackfeet Indians designate him as "Lone Chief." He thought at first they meant "Loan Chief." Mr. Morgenthau has lunch with Mr. Roosevelt every Monday. One of the last government officials to greet Mr. Roosevelt on his return was Postmaster General Farley. The general did not go to the Coast and was not present in Washington when the President arrived here. Wise ones knew that Mr. Roosevelt did not want Farley with him in the Northwest or in Wisconsin because of the political inferences which would naturally have been drawn from his presence.

CITY AWARDED $80,402 IN SUIT

The City of Pittsburgh's law department, whose head, Cornelius D. Scully, was fired recently, scored a victory in the courts today. The city was represented by Solicitors John J. Kennedy, who recently resigned, and Thomas M. Benner.

Judge James H. Gray ordered the Pennsylvania Railroad to pay the city $80,402, plus interest, from 1929, for damage claims which the city had made good to property holders near the Pennsylvania Station.

These property changes were made in connection with the plans, announced several years ago, for a new railroad terminal.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15.—Mary Pickford was excited today as Douglas Fairbanks neared home, but—

"You know I'm not going to say whether I will press that divorce against Doug or drop it. I've never talked about this affair since its inception, and I won't break that rule now."

Thus she spoke as friends hoped for a reconciliation between the famous film couple.

Miss Pickford arrived home yesterday and went immediately to Pickfair, palatial estate where she and Fairbanks spent the happy days of their married life.

Fairbanks is expected in Denver tomorrow by airplane from New York to attend the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Fairbanks, widow of his brother John. He will arrive in Hollywood the latter part of the week.

LIQUOR STORES OPPOSED BY YOUNG G. O. P.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Demand for abandonment of the state house store system today was before the Republican State Committee, backed by a majority of county chairmen of the Young Republicans. The demand was voiced by Charles W. Carroll, state chairman of the Young Republicans, and opposed the principle of the state being in the liquor business, Carroll said:

"If our state government insists on remaining in the liquor business, why not become 100 per cent Socialistic and take over the distilleries, where the real profits are being made? I daresay that if the matter were made an issue the big distilleries would quickly withdraw their support of the liquor stores."

Carroll pointed out that the liquor stores had fallen far short of earning the revenue predicted for relief, old age pensions and blind pensions. The money for equipment of stores, he said, had not found its way back to the state treasury. Bootlegging, he said, had not been ended by the liquor store system.

As a substitute for the stores, Carroll offered "a model patterned after the Brooks high-license law."

AIDE CLEARED, INSULL HAPPY

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Samuel Insull, Sr., expressed his pleasure today at the acquittal in Criminal Court of Marshall E. Sampsell, first of the utility executives to be tried following collapse of the vast Insull power empire.

A jury found Sampsell not guilty last night on a charge of embezzling 4,000 shares of stock from the Central Illinois Public Service Company while he was president. Four hours of deliberation and six ballots were required to reach the verdict.

Testifying in his own defense, Sampsell admitted using the stock to raise funds in a vain attempt to stave off collapse of the Insull utility structure in the hectic days of 1932.

Samuel Insull and his brother Martin are awaiting trial on similar state embezzlement charges of using company securities to meet personal obligations.

Order Dismantling Of Rodgers Airport

All remaining buildings are to be cleared from Rodgers Field and the runways plowed up to prevent its being used by aviators, the County Commissioners have ordered. empty shell was found in the rifle. Also there were two sets of fishing tackle in the car.

Hundreds gathered about the little garage as the police car sped to the scene.

Among these was Father J. B. Gavahan, of St. Paul's Cathedral. Barry was dead when he arrived.

Barry leaves, besides his wife, a sister.

FACED PROBERS

Just two months ago Barry, known as the "Honest Cop," emerged from his retirement long enough to go before the Police Research Commission with suggestions for improvement of the force.

He urged the divorce of police from the politics, civil service protection for city detectives, and opposed a segregated vice district.

Barry resigned from the police force less than a year ago, after 23 years service. With his retirement he was presented with a fishing outfit by his friends on the force. Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall and former Inspector James N. Hoey were among the donors.

Barry was appointed police inspector of the Oakland district in July, 1932, by the late Mayor Kline. He succeeded Inspector Hoey who had fallen into the bad graces of the political bosses.

Finds Other Girl, Not Job, Kept Him Away

The boy friend obtained a job as a night club singer, and, although he writes to her, "Broken Heart" doesn't see him any more.

She thought it was his work that kept him away until she saw him with another girl. Now she's afraid she's losing him and asks for help.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been reading your column daily and have told my girl friends about it, and they are steady readers now. I am writing you because I am badly in need of aid.

Miss Brunot

I have been going with a young man quite awhile. A few months ago he was employed to sing in a night club. And although he keeps writing, I've only seen him once.

ANOTHER GIRL

I always thought it was his work that kept him away from me. But the other day I saw him with a girl and they were all dressed up as if going somewhere. To a dance, likely. I can dance quite well myself, and like all sports. But he never takes me anywhere. I am afraid that I am losing him. So please, please help me.

BROKEN HEART.

Are you sure your imagination was not overworking itself when you saw this fellow out with another girl, and all dressed up. She may have been another performer in the night club and they may have been work-bound.

When one is in love, one is so prone to think ill of the one loved. Why, I cannot say. This situation always gets my goat. . . . It is as if some evil sprite was conniving against the very existence of Cupid . . . Why not have faith in this boy friend of yours, Broken Heart.

He is working in a place where he will have many temptations to make new friendships with other girls, and why let him see that you have a jealous and possessive nature. It may discourage him. If he intends to be a public singer, it would not do for him to have a jealous wife, and he may stop, no matter how much he cares for you, while the stopping is good.

Don't allow doubt of a fanciful sort to bother you. Remember you have already won him, and now it is up to you to keep him. The reason he does not take you out may be a selfish one. The fact he works in places of amusement may make him desire a quiet evening when with you.

LOVES MARRIED MAN

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a young girl of 17, and considered attractive and have a good many attentions from the boys. I am madly in love with a married man of 23.

We have been seeing each other often. And yet he has never told me he has a wife and two children, and all the time I would just love to mother his children. He married so young that it was puppy love. Should he get a divorce, or should we forget our great love?

MADLY IN LOVE.

You have taken a good deal for granted, sister, to be asking me about the divorce before the man even has confessed he has a wife and family to you . . . The very fact that he has not, rather indicates they are a thing apart to him from his affair with you . . .

I never would trust a married man who philanders and does not tell that he is married . . . He has not the right respect for himself, and how, then, could he respect you?

As for your MOTHERING his children, your statement is presumptuous, sister . . . Already these children are properly mothered . . . Wait until she steps out, before you step in . . .

Have a very plain talk with him, and if he still lingers, and really confesses the puppy love is a thing of the past, then it will be time enough for you to weave a wholesome future for yourself.

MOTHER ENTERTAINS BOYS

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl of 17 and have been running around with a boy of 20. I am in high school. The first time he came up, I invited him, and mother approved of it. In fact, she told me to do so . . . Mother likes him, and insists I have him around.

Sometimes she and I even rode down street, to pick him up.

And then the next day, she would growl, and scold me, and tell me I should have dates.

When I have a date, mother sits all evening with us and does all the talking, and never gives me a chance. The next day she will say it is dreadful that I keep such late hours, and that she loses too much sleep. Why doesn't she go to bad?

I really am disgusted. If I break with this boy friend, she'll bring us together again, as she has done in the past. She even has made me go to the phone and beg his pardon.

SORROWFUL.

You have a notionate and vain mother, who hasn't gotten over a craving for attention. She is the sort who monopolizes the younger generation and uses her own daughter as the bait.

CLINGING TO YOUTH

There are a few such women, although, thank heaven, they do not predominate. Vainly she clings to an imagined youth. She hasn't grown up mentally of emotionally yet, and hasn't the initiative to make her own circle of younger people.

Daughters of such women have to ward against hasty marriages or being old maids. They are made into such wall flowers. You'll have to make hay while the sun shines and when you are in the open and away from your mother.

I wouldn't give such advice very often. For as a rule mothers are very sympathetic and very human where daughters come in, and want to give them opportunity for social enjoyment and in a wise fashion. I merely say what I do, taking for granted you have not exaggerated the situation.

GIRLS WHO PRINK TOO MUCH MAY FAIL AS WIVES, SAYS FAY KING

MONEY AND TIME SERIOUSLY SPENT CAN MAKE ANY GIRL ATTRACTIVE
THE GIRL WHO IS THINKING OF OTHERS DOES NOT CARE SO MUCH HOW SHE LOOKS
SHE THINKS TOO MUCH OF HERSELF!
FAE KING

By FAY KING.

How often we have been a little surprised at a popular man who had gone about with so many beautiful and fashionable girls, finally marrying a girl who was "plain" and "dowdy" compared to his other friends.

After they are married we are also surprised to see what an attractive young woman his wife turns out to be. She has more time and money now to spend upon her appearance and it is surprising how quickly this can improve one.

He wisely chose her when he had observed that she looked less lovely than his other friends, because she was thinking more of others than herself.

Often girls who look exceedingly nice are only devoted to themselves, and such as they do not make the best wives.

AUTUMN'S BRIGHT COLORS FOR SCHOOL

By PRUNELLA WOOD

BRIGHT WOOLS are the next bet in the wardrobe, in models that we can wear for late vacation trips to mountain or northern cruise resorts, and have at hand a few weeks later when nippy weather arrives before Indian summer.

Two-piece frocks which show a dark skirt and a lighter blouse are especially good this season, with such lovely colors as raspberry and old blue, hunting pink and black, or paddy green and brown used for them. Plaids are gay and very large, carrying over the same shades that have been so popular in cotton frocks all summer. A complete set of dark accessories is necessary for frocks of this type, however, or their gaiety will be lost in confusion.

THE WOOLEN frock which makes a good travel dress is the same one that will be useful on the campus. Jersey weaves are never prone to unsightly mass wrinkling, and the bolder the plaid, the less obtrusively mean little wear and tear soil spots will show up on it. The girl who chooses a jacket and frock costume for her first days back at schol usually gets three outfits from it—one for week-ending, one for chilly days and one for the first frost, when she can slip her polo coat on over the whole business and sit the bleachers with cozy complacence. Models which are two-piece are double-duty, for the skirt can always be worn with odd jumpers.

There seems to be a dearth of white collar touches on the wool frocks of the moment, self-material ties, trick collars or metal gadgets being the popular detailing at the throat. Girls pressed with rushes, studies or what-not will appreciate this labor saving short cut to neatness, and willingly forego the organza, pique and linen freshness that is usually the school girl's lot.

Left, a two-piece knitted rabbit's hair wool costume which combines a raspberry peplumed coatee with a blue skirt. Note the scalloped edges over the bodice.

Center, a surah plaid of bemberg in brown and white with Schiaparelli's spool collar. It is one-piece and cut on the bias, but it has an action pleat back blouse. Above, a red and black worsted frock with a trig black velveteen jacket. The bright ash tray buttons are also on the frock, in smaller size.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By Josephine Culbertson

A Distributional Storm

The man who perpetrated that glorious paradox "No generalization is absolutely true, not even this one" came about as near to the truth as generalizers are likely to, though I have often thought that, so far as Bridge is concerned, the last part might be improved to "except this one." But the real trouble in Bridge is that players often misunderstand the generalization itself. No sane authority would undertake to guarantee that by bidding in a certain way you could never lose. The best he could do would be to say hardly ever.

Mrs. Culbertson

Even when a player goes down four tricks on an Overcall of an adverse contract at the range of two, the Overcall is not necessarily unsound, although it must be admitted that hundreds of thousands of unsound Overcalls are made daily. Even the best Overcalls may be doomed to defeat. Whenever an Opening bid has been made it is an affirmation of certain definite values—a minimum of high card tricks and a biddable suit.

Clyde E. Myers, of Providence, R. I., sent to me the hand below with the request for me to comment upon the bidding. He held the South hand.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 10 9 8 3 2 ♡ 2 ◇ K 10 4 ♣ 7 6
♠ 5 ♡ Q J 10 7 4 ◇ A J 8 2 ♣ A 10 8	North West East South	♠ A K 7 6 4 ♡ 3 ◇ Q 9 7 ♣ Q J 5 4
	♠ — ♡ A K 9 8 6 5 ◇ 6 5 3 ♣ K 9 3 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♡	Double	Pass (1)
Pass	Pass

1—At this point North, despite East's spade bid, should have rescued South with a bid of two spades. North's hand seems surely good for five spade tricks, even conceding bad distribution; and those spades are good only as trumps, and worthless in support of South's heart bid. There is an excellent chance from North's point of view that South will hold honor-tricks which may allow two spades to be made.

I think Mr. Myers was perfectly justified in making his bid of two hearts. From the post-mortem standpoint of South and his partner it was no doubt unfortunate that he made the Overcall as East and West might have had some difficulty themselves in finding a safe spot to play this misfit, but when a player holds 2½ honor-tricks and a six-card major suit, he certainly would be subjecting himself to a charge of cowardice if he failed to overcall when not vulnerable.

In the play West opened his singleton spade, which was ruffed in the closed hand. South then led the Ace and King of trumps, which was not his best line of play, and completed the disaster by leading the third round of trumps. This West won, and drew all of South's trumps, then led a small diamond. The King was not played from Dummy, and East won with the Queen and returned the Queen of clubs, the final result being that South took only four tricks on a contract to take eight.

Actually, South had a better line of play. West's Double of the two-heart contract certainly marks him with length in trumps. Therefore, South's best oportunity to make tricks with his hand is to cash as many of his small trumps as possible and seek to gather in a trick or two with his high cards if he can. There is nothing in South's hand to suggest the advisability of drawing the trumps under the circumstances. Probably as good a play as any is to lead a small diamond when the first trick is won and play the King to either the first or second round. There is always the chance that opponents may make a mistake in their play, and in desperate situations they should be given an opportunity.

Chinese Transferred to Cellar

There was something in the excited demeanor of Hank and Bill which reflected the urgency of the injunction Lillian had laid upon them. Something must have happened while we were gone, I conjectured, to make her so insistent that we bring the Chinese in through the only door which no window overlooked.

I could understand her desire to keep the arrival of the Chinese a secret as far as we could, but this especial mention of an overlooking window spelled to me, who knew her so well, some out-of-the-ordinary happening which had prodded her precautionary spirit to this special effort.

"Very well," my father said. "We'll bring them to the kitchen door. Now, you cut through the hedge and tell her that we are coming. We'll stay right here for a minute or two, to give you a chance to get there."

PUT IN CELLAR

When the door had closed upon them, my father gave a terse direction to Otto.

"Drive directly around the house to that back path," he said, "and draw up directly before the kitchen door." Otto touched his cap and sent the big limousine along as he was directed.

Lillian threw the door open as we stopped. Jim and Katie stood just behind her. Jim with his usually quiet, stolid air. Katie all agog with excitement, her eyes dancing, her mobile face mirroring the curiosity that I knew was consuming her. Katie, I reflected, was being "in at the death," and how she was enjoying it!

"Get those men into the basement room as quickly as possible," Lillian said. "I'll tell you about it later. The room is all ready, and—aren't there enough of you to get them down, with Jim's help, of course?"

"We don't need Jim," my father said, in the same low tones Lillian was using. "Ronald, will you tell Bob to come here? He's driving in now, I see."

Ronald sped on his errand as my father alighted from the car.

"Hank and Bill, get this camouflaging stuff out of the car as quickly as you can," he directed. "Jim and Katie, take the things from them as fast as they hand them to you. Otto, give me a hand with these lashings, but don't loosen the last knots till the boys come back."

My father already was working swiftly, himself, at the cords with which the Chinese were fastened to the hand rail of the car. Ronald dashed up with Bob, just as Hank and Bill took the last blankets from the car and handed them to Jim and Katie.

"Now," said my father tensely, his hand upon the last knots. "Ronald you and Bob and Henry take one of these men. Otto, William and I will take the other. Jim, go ahead and see that the doors are open and the way clear."

KATIE SPEAKS

With the vigor of a man half his years, he did valiant service in lifting the bound and gagged Chinese from the car, carrying them into the kitchen and thence to the basement room which Jim had prepared for them. It seemed but the traditional "twinkling of an eye" before the kitchen and the car outside were empty of any trace of our captives and the things we had used to cover them, as if they never had been there.

"Now, Otto," my father said, when all of the group save Ronald had returned to the kitchen, "get the limousine around to its usual place. And Bob, you will run that car of the Chinese into the farthest corner of the garage? Jim, will you show him where to put it, and then will you cover it up so that no casual passerby, or one that is not casual, can see it?"

"Nobody can find it after I get through with it," Jim said, not boastfully but as one stating a fact, and my father nodded approval.

"Good!" he said, then turned with a sudden air of weariness toward the door. But he did not go through it, for Katie was suddenly in front of him, her arms akimbo, her manner a ludicrous mixture of awe and belligerence.

"Plees, may I spik sometings?" she asked.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Future for Young Diabetic Good if Rules Are Followed

Parents are decidedly upset when told their child is afflicted with diabetes. But today, fortunately, the outlook for a child suffering from diabetes is much more favorable than it was in former years. This can be attributed to our increased knowledge of diabetes and the discovery of insulin.

Dr. Copeland

Many children suffer from diabetes. Few of them succumb because of the improved methods of treatment. A diabetic child who adheres to a rigid diet and carefully follows instructions, will develop equally as well, both physically and mentally, as a child without this handicap. Most diabetic children are bright and learn quickly. This is fortunate because the problems confronting a child with this disease are more difficult than those of the normal child.

The diabetic child is usually taller and heavier than the average boy or girl. Because of the apparently favorable state of health, months or even years may pass before the parent becomes aware that the child is diabetic.

As a rule the diabetic drinks an unusual amount of water and visits the bathroom frequently. These children have excellent appetites but fail to gain weight.

An excessive accumulation of sugar in the blood soon leads to irritability, nervousness and a susceptibility to infections and the common diseases of childhood. Continued neglect may lead to coma, cataract formation, hardening of the arteries and practically all the complications of diabetes encountered in the adult.

Sometimes the presence of sugar in the urine is the direct result of having an excess of sugar and fats in the diet. In such cases a carefully prescribed diet may be sufficient to overcome the disturbance and completely rid the urine of sugar.

Not all cases respond to diet alone. In many instances it is necessary that the child receive injections of insulin.

It is generally considered, but not definitely proved, that heredity is an important influence in diabetes. A recent study of statistics shows that when two diabetics marry, diabetes often develops in the offspring. For this reason it is imperative that sufferers from diabetes be on the alert for signs of this disease in their children. Periodic health examinations and routine urinalysis will help detect this disorder. It must never be overlooked or neglected.

A child who shows signs of undernourishment, repeated loss of weight and lack of development, should be taken to a physician for a thorough physical examination. No examination is complete unless the urine is examined for sugar and other abnormalities.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Now that long legs are fashionable there is an inclination toward the lifted waistline. Everybody is after that long, graceful sweep from lower ribs to waistline, to thigh, to knee in proper undulations.

Frocks remain form-revealing, snug about the hips. So hip rolling is going on at a great pace. Get down and tumble around.

Though tan doesn't benefit the skin, it is a beauty help to little Paleface. The sunlight will put pep in her gizzard, too, bring her out of inertia and listlessness.

Good food, plenty of fresh air, sun baths and relaxation are highly beneficial to the girl who is chalky skinned and underweight. They are what the doctor will order if she goes to him for a consultation.

Although she's designed many of her own dresses and those of friends, post-deb Peggy Berger didn't design her own wedding gown.

For she'll wear her mother's wedding dress when she becomes the bride of Thomas Reed III, this afternoon at 8 o'clock in Shadyside Presbyterian Church.

PEGGY BERGER

Another bride of today will wear her mother's wedding gown—Elizabeth Ross Thomas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Vernon D. Thomas, Hampton street, who'll wed Robley Jump Hackett, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robley Hackett, of Baltimore, tonight at 8 o'clock in the Thomas home.

Because of the illness of her mother, Mrs. William A. Berger, of Glenshaw, Peggy Berger's wedding to the son of the Phillip S. Reeds, of Paris, France, will be simple.

Her mother's wedding dress is of cream satin with the waist of Duchesse lace. The gown has a train, and sleeves reaching almost to the elbow, and puffed at the shoulder. Her veil will fall from a Duchesse lace cap. Her flowers will be lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Uncle Is to Give Her in Marriage

Giving her in marriage will be her uncle, C. M. Harnies. The Rev. H. A. Dalzell will be the officiant.

She'll have three attendants, Mrs. Cornelius Decatur Scully, Jr. (Elinor Tucker), Barbara McDonnell and Mary Harnies, her cousin.

Mrs. Scully will appear in pastel blue chiffon, and Barbara and Mary in pastel pink chiffon. Their hats will harmonize with their gowns, and they will carry summer flowers.

William H. Berger, brother of the bride, will be best man, and Alan W. Wood II, her cousin, and Harry W. Keller will be ushers.

A reception for the families and close friends will be held in the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, the C. M. Harnieses, of Fair Oaks street.

Elizabeth Thomas will wear her mother's wedding gown, which is fashioned of white satin, ivoried now, and made with a graceful court train, long sleeves, and a bertha yoke of Duchesse lace.

Her veil of ivory tulle will cascade from a cap of old, real lace. She will carry an all white bouquet to include roses and snapdragons.

She'll have just one attendant—her young cousin, Helen Thomas, daughter of the D. S. Thomases, of Aspinwall, as junior bridesmaid. She'll wear a picturesque frock of pink taffeta, reaching to the floor, and will carry a nosegay of pink and blue flowers.

Thomas Hackett will be his brother's best man. The Rev. W. Sproule Boyd, of Aspinwall, will officiate.

Following a reception, the bride and bridegroom will leave for a Canadian trip.

Through the Spyglass

VIEWING THE NEW

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

If you can keep your guests' eyes on the ball (in this case, on the dice) your party is sure to be a huge success. Especially so when you can buy a great big Chuck-a-Luck dice jigger together with a marked scoring "board" (this one is green felt) for $1.95. Monte Carlo come to town, as it were, and plenty of breathless moments for the players!

Something to tickle the fancy of the girl going away to school . . . or even you, who are staying at home! A new compact that houses powder and rouge within its neat pastel or white enamel outside. In trim little rectangles of color . . . complete with (and here's the novel part) complete with a tiny silvery shovel to shovel in your own loose powder! Such fun, after the way you've had to use your nail file for digging 'round . . . and such cute little tricksters with their twisted handles! Priced $2.00. (Initials for them, 15c up.)

Have you seen the puppet show that's in town? Dainty little dollies showing what's to be done when you have hair on your legs or arms? (Or elsewhere undesirable, for that matter.) Better see it, because . . .

This thing of being a woman is a troublous job at times. Your hair must be lovely and luxurious . . . yet even a spear of it other than on your scalp, is bad . . . very bad! And so this company brings out their little "dehairifying" kit and offers it to you with their best wishes and many happy returns (of the season, NOT the hair)!

It being $2.65 worth of hair-ridder! A cake of wax, an antiseptic powder, a salve and a cold cream . . . now to be sold for $1.00. The method that not only removes the hair for the moment . . . but weakens it so that it does not grow in again for several months.

For the benefit of girls who are soon to be going rah-rahing for dear old So-and-So, we have found the latest about neckwear and handkies, both of which play important parts in the accessorying of any costume. And . . .

Buster Brown would all but jump out of his place in the comic strip if he could see the collar and cuff set that we saw! Because they're as typical of him as their name . . . pert, childishly gay, simple. Of white satin with a big black bow tie under the chin. And the sort to make any campus frock or school number look demure enough to fool the most eagle-eyed professor! $2.00.

Others that delight dainty preferences are the new handmade ones of braid . . . worked into curlicues and wiggle-waggles.

Some of the snootiest sources say "wear a bright green hat" . . . and apparently they mean even more than that. Because we've found the grandest green chiffon handkies to tie 'round a wrist that's on its way to a dance. Great floating squares of them—18" to be exact . . . handrolled edges, and priced $1.00.

Or clutch one of the violent plaids of mousseline de soie that crosses itself with yellow, blue, green, or red—large plaids whose edges end in fringe . . . whose wingspread is 18" square . . . and whose price is $1.50.

Whilst for actual nose-blowing—you can do even this with a gesture if you use one of the loud plaid linens that have a walloping initial filling up a whole quarter of them! All colors . . . all initials . . . grand values for 25c each.

sponsor lovely coats of

shown in August 15th VOGUE, pages 12 and 13

JACK ZIMMERMAN, the widely known American fur designer, was first to ally tremendous youthful chic with Alaska Sealskin . . . dramatizing this fur in such a fresh, interesting way that it is now the choice of ultra-smart young people everywhere. Mr. Zimmerman has created a limited number of Alaska Sealskin Coats (black and Rembrandt brown), exclusively for Grabowsky's in Pittsburgh. You are invited to see this collection in our "Frigidaire" Cooled Fur Salon tomorrow.

• Left—A slim, versatile, belted coat of ALASKA SEALSKIN. You'll love the way this supple fur obeys every drape ordained by the designer in the jabot-revers, where custom-sewn inverted plates burst into rippling fullness.

• Right—If you want to look young, charming and appealing choose this swagger ALASKA SEALSKIN. Irresistible—that Quakery collar, tenderly pointed by hand; that row of fur buttons marching down the center-front.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Wedding Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I have received a wedding invitation and am in doubt if it includes the reception, or not, and also if an answer is necessary. If so, will you please tell me how to answer it? This is the way the invitation reads:

Mr. and Mrs. Black B. Black request your presence at the marriage of their daughter Ruth to Mr. John Henry Blank on Saturday, the Fifth of September at seven-thirty in the evening United Church New York

READER.

This form of invitation is for the church ceremony only, although it is very unusual for a church-ceremony-invitation to read as this one does in the second line. Usually, for the church ceremony invitation, the second line reads, "request the honor of your presence," and the third line, "at the marriage of their daughter."

An invitation to a church ceremony only does not require an answer. It is the invitation to the reception that we answer. And this invitation does not at all indicate that there is to be a reception, or, if there is to be one, this is not an invitation to it.

Answering Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the correct way to answer a formal wedding invitation. T.

If the invitation is to the church ceremony only (the second line for this usually reads, "request the honour of your presence"), it does not require an acknowledgment.

But if there is included an invitation to the reception (the second line for this usually reads, "request the pleasure of your company"), this does require an answer. The acceptance or regret should be written on the first page of double-sheeted letter-paper (plain white is in excellent form), and should be spaced as the invitation is spaced. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tower accept with pleasure Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents') kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of September at five o'clock

The regret reads:

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tower regret that they are unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents') kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of September

As you will notice, it is not necessary, in the regret, to repeat the hour.

NEEDLECRAFT DESIGNS

CAT PILLOW — PATTERN 633

This lovely cat, used as a decoration on a pillow, will add that touch of coziness that every woman wants in her home. Besides looking very contented and beautiful, it's a real pleasure to embroider, for it's done in those simple stitches—outline and single stitch—that just let the needle fly. You can carry it out in wool, silk or cotton, as you wish, and it's equally pretty on light or dark materials.

Pattern 633 comes to you with a transfer pattern of a cat 13x16 inches; directions for embroidering it and making a pillow; material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Seek New Quarters For Relief Groups

County officials will meet again tomorrow with representatives of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board to discuss new quarters for the relief organization. The commissioners yesterday told Director George P. Mills that there was no way in which they could appropriate $22,500 for a year's rent for quarters in the Smithfield Street Building. Instead of paying for new quarters where all the relief activities can be centralized, county officials are trying to find additional room in county-owned buildings.

HUEY'S BIG GUNS SPIKED IN WAR

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Senator Huey P. Long's political machine started a steam-roller assault on the New Orleans city government today, but the throttle was stuck short of the high speed sought by the "Kingfish."

The first skirmish on the floor of the Legislature went against the Senator. The House refused to suspend rules so that Long could rush through measures to tighten his grip on the hostile city.

More than two dozen bills were put on the calendar in an effort to widen state control over New Orleans affairs and provide for a sweeping investigation into the municipal government.

Ignoring a New Orleans civil district court injunction ordering him to disband the national guardsmen who hold the New Orleans voting registration office, Senator Long came to Baton Rouge.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Your New York and Mine

Mrs. Conrad Nagel's next groom will be her best friend's husband (Sidney Franklin) of the movie industry . . . Mrs. Nagel fell in love with him while trying to reconcile them! . . . Eunice Healy of the show shops and George Rudis, the Wall Streeter, will be parson'd in two weeks . . . The wealthy and social Clarence Moores have reached that decision . . . Sylvia Adams, the former "Follies" dolly, is in Reno to have it unraveled . . . George Metaxa (whose second wife was killed in that crash with him) and his first frau are rounding the town together, again . . . Prince Obolensky and Dorothy Seims are glowmancing . . . W. C. Covington, rich No'th Cahlinah hosiery man, and Jean Bartlett, of Reno, are in the skies winging here after a Nevada merger yesterday morning . . . Mrs. Ralph Wonders (Kay White, Ziegfeld girl) is divorcing the CBS exec.

More biggies than you can imagine (and including at least one Supreme Court judge) will be indicted in mortgage scandals this week. And it's about time! . . . Grover Whalen will not be the Tammany nominee for Comptroller . . . The Demos haven't found anyone to oppose Prial yet . . . Eligible George Sherman and Marie Kiely, the loveliest of the East Hampton lovelies, are thermometing . . . Ditto Dan Woodhall and Josie Gray—see the social register . . . S. N. Behrman, the playwright, and Elizabeth Myer, daughter of Eugene Myer, the Federal Reserve banker, are another space-filler . . . The wives of Gov. Lehman and Warden Lawes begged the Governor to reprieve the late Mrs. Antonio up to the moment she was killed.

Tony Brown, the "Tobacco Road" producer, will re-marry his ex-wife, who will tell a Mexican judge about L. Cole . . . "Red" Dolan, former star reporter and now movie writer, is a groom, after all these years of going straight, too . . . The man who raised two and a half millions to build the Hotel New Yorker hasn't even a credit card there now.

The drama in that story about Leslie Berger, now a bus boy at the Hollywood spot, is this: He is the only bus boy with his name in lights! He was in an act there (the 4 Climas), now folded—and the restaurant is too lazy to change the lights out front! . . . Helen Morgan will be in demand after the "You Belong to Me" flicker is released. Watch David J. Holt in it—the male S. Temple . . . L. Alter, the composer, and Hope Dare (who has a wild imagination) are in tempo . . . H. Richman will get his heaviest wage at the Detroit Blossom Heath—$6,500 . . . The Cotton Club is considering joining the no cover charge field . . . A. Silver argues that from the rave Boston reviews the title will be changed to "Life Begins at $8.80."

Orchids to The Elks of Yonkers who are throwing a benefit for the poor there at Proctor's Sept. 8th. I can have 50 per cent of the receipts for any actors' fund. Fifty per cent is the best bargain yet! What headliners will help make it a success—is George M. Cohan in town! . . . Orchids to the "Fog" number and Dan Healy at Marden's new Riviera show, a honey . . . Orchids to the Howard Brothers ageless opera travesty at the Casino de Paree . . . Ditto to the ditty: "Two Cigarettes in the Dark," a sentimental song saga . . . Scallions to the spoilers of "The Very Thought of You" melody on the air with their alleged "improvements"—fussy!

There is no doubting that "Love in Bloom" is a lovely tune, but it is a beautiful bit of borrowing from "Jolly Brother's Gallop," one of those pieces for children, eras ago . . . As was "It Had to Be You" . . . The talk is on again that within 4 weeks Fox will marry Paramount . . . Helen Wills Moody is the sort who will oblige news photogs, but she won't speak. One of them asked her to gab for the newsreels the other day. She shook her head no. He then asked her if she would be photo'd. She nodded her head yes.

Frank Merlin, the producer, took a long lease on the Fulton Theater for his new play and then his backer took a long walk! . . . RKO is plotting to move out of the Rockefeller edifice back to the Palace Bldg . . . Not RKO films, however . . . The Fred Warings are being heir-conditioned . . . Lt. Comdr. Frank Hawks will do a series of sub-stratosphere flights to improve weather condition reports long in advance . . . After 8 pictures John Boles has a breakdown . . . The frau of one of the biggest picture magnates will be Reno-bound soon . . . The George Raft-Virginia Pine romance is wilting rapidly.

Mae West will protest against Patsy Kelly's crack in "Girl From Missouri"—viz: "I'm a home girl—like Mae West" . . . Missouri, by the way, protested against the title, but desisted when M-G-M reminded the State that Harlow was born there! . . . Wonder who that mysterious gent was that Hazel Forbes escorted to N. Y. via plane? . . . The Manor Twins are suing Norman Anthony's mag for ballyhooing a clown photo of them with Max Baer, the caption being: "Max does a snappy workout with a couple of dumbbells" . . . They allege the clowning cost them their jobs at the Casino de Paree! . . . James Thurber mixed it with Ernest Boyd at Tony's the other a. m., Thurber jerking Boyd's beard until the litterateur screamed and screamed!

Mae Clarke is improving in a private sanitarium . . . Peter Arno and the mag that front covers him are feuding . . . J. Moriarity is too sick because of Ann Gould . . . A phony is posing on B'way as Shirley Temple's father, be careful. Her dad is a Los Angeles bank exec . . . Did Geraldine Dvorak marry that Italian Count 3 wks ago? . . . "Old Charlie," the Cheese Club's pal, goes to the poor house in two weeks . . . Line from a forthcoming play: "He has all the arrogance and twice the ignorance of a movie supervisor!" . . . The U. S. beer figure for July will show 7 million barrels . . . Ruth Chatterton now regrets losing George Brent—very, very sad story . . . Add definitions of a Broadway columnist: "A Broadway columnist is a guy who finds out things that people don't want known and tells them to people to whom it doesn't make any difference."

Chat About People of Theater

By KARL KRUG

The Tattle Tale: The Fulton Theater, which will reopen August 31, as announced exclusively in this column yesterday, will have a share of both Fox and Universal features for the new season . . . The pick of the independent crop will also go to the Sixth street house . . . The Fox exchange is responsible for the delayed showing of Will Rogers' "Handy Andy" in the Fulton . . . Your old Pitt stock-acting friend, Clyde Shafer, is now playing in "The Moonshiner's Daughter" on Billy Bryant's showboat in Cincinnati waters . . . The Bryant troupe has just closed a rousing four-weeks' engagement of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" . . . One of the boys in the Paramount ballyhoo headquarters was so stuck for a story that he sent out a yard stating Mae West is brushing up on her tap dancing . . . A last-minute shift brings the mystery film, "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" to town Thursday in place of John Galsworthy's "One More River."

MILT IN TITUSVILLE

John Hooley, Family manager, home from a vacation in the Canadian wilds, reports that Milt Crandall is going strong in Titusville . . . Milt, one of the goofier of the better press agents, is handling the Diamond Jubilee which goes on August 24 to 27 . . . From Titusville, Crandall will move to Erie to let the world know about the NRA celebration there . . . Milt, in case you never heard it before, is the gent who had a plan to stop the execution of Ruth Snyder . . . For a few minutes, I mean . . . Leo Carillo, whose stage booking here was cancelled, has invested in a comfortable annuity, so, as he explains, "I can sit on my Spanish patio when I'm washed up" . . . That Pitt stock rumor grows stronger . . . George Shafer, boss of the Penn avenue house, is finding it difficult to get pictures for the new year . . . Gene Connelly was so ill with that heat prostration attack that five doctors were in attendance awhile.

DIRECTOR GETS BREAK

Very happy to hear that Dudley Murphy, the young director of "Emperor Jones" and "St. Louis Blues," is finally getting a tumble from the Hollywood powers . . . He is to direct M-G-M's "Tiptoes," a musical drama of the Berlin Imperial Opera, in which he will work with such big-wigs as Sigmund Romberg and Oscar Hammerstein II . . . Murphy is a serious student of motion picture-making and is very tolerant of those under him . . . It was my pleasure to watch him work on "Emperor Jones," and I know from what he told me of his ambitions that his "break" on the West Coast must be the fulfillment of many of his dreams . . . Charlie King, who hasn't been heard of much since his sensational success in "The Broadway Melody," will show up again in "The Captain Hates the Sea," production of which hasn't stopped despite what you may have heard . . . The unleased wire carries a report that a certain star divorced her husband because he planned a heart balm suit, naming her leading man, and she beat him to it?

RIDER A LAW STUDENT

Pretty Gaytanne Jackson, 21-year-old stunt rider with that bicycle act in Kennywood, studies criminal law in the winter at Boston College, where she will get her LL. B. in 1936 . . . Mary Phillips will not have her original role in George M. Cohan's screening of his stage play, "Gambling," as lots of folks hoped . . . Wynne Gibson and Dorothy Burgess have been given the feminine leads . . . Lots of laughs in that local reference to Louis Calhern as a "bit player"

Domestic

Ann Dvorak has the title role of a domestically inclined wife in "Housewife," feature of the screen program to open Friday in the Stanley.

Next Civic Play Is Drama

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Next week's production by the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse will be "The Shining Hour," fifth in the regular series of subscription plays, the last of which will be Woollcott and Kaufman's "The Dark Tower," the week of September 3. "The Shining Hour" was one of the dramatic successes of last season in New York, with a record of 120 performances. It is an English play by Keith Winter. The New York cast included a number of players from London. Judith Anderson, heroine this week in "The Female of the Species," recently appeared in it in an eastern summer theater production, and she has under consideration, among other proposals, an invitation from Albany, N. Y., to act in the same play in that city.

The death of Augustus Thomas has removed one of the American dramatists who helped the native stage to rise to greater artistic heights. In his long career he was contemporary of Clyde Fitch, whom he survived by 25 years, and of George M. Cohan, who has made his own place in the theater as secure as the two masters who have preceded him. Between Fitch and the present day Mr. Thomas for many years kept pace with the trend in the theater that brought new writers to the front, including Edwin Milton Royle, George Broadhurst, Eugene Walter, Edward Sheldon, Channing Pollock and Owen Davis, who until recent years, did not achieve the distinction that came to the others. Twenty years ago Mr. Thomas received the gold medal of the National Institute of Arts and Letters for his work as a dramatist. He had not been active as a playwright in recent years.

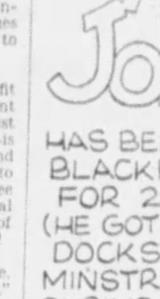
HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15.—Hello! "Anything for a Laugh" used to be Hollywood's motto, but now the screen-town is learning that a practical joke may cost money. And so celluloidville's practical joke-smiths are spending their waking hours in a pursuit other than thinking up ways and means of getting a hee-haw out of the embarrassment of a friend.



Mr. Wellman

William Wellman, the director, and a most avid humorist, has to go to court to prove that he didn't engineer an asserted laugh-plot to get Irene Dunne's "stand-in," Mary Minter Bitgood, to sit in an electrically-wired chair on the set. Because Mrs. Bitgood wants $100,000 from Wellman now. She claims this big joke cost the life of her unborn baby.

Those of the screen colony who have perhaps been best known for their practical joking have been Charles Chaplin and his three satellites—Harry Crocker, Harry D'Arrast and Charlie Lederer. Charlie MacArthur, Helen Hayes' writer-husband, and his partner, Ben Hecht, have gained quite a reputation that way and, of course, the ribber, Vince Barnett, has made money out of making monkeys of people.

At the Uplifters' polo field the other Sunday Big Boy Williams changed ponies in the middle of EVERY period with much flourish and ado. A curious one asked why Big Boy switched mounts so often, and a groom replied:

"It all depends on the size of the crowd in the grandstand."

Well, you'd never know Peggy Fears—and even her hubby, A. C. Blumenthal, would probably have to take a second glance to recognize his wifey.

The Fox Studio, where Peggy's making her movie debut in "Lottery Lover," ordered the makeup department to do a complete "overhauling" job. Her hair's tinted, her eyebrows adjusted and special grease paint tricks are being used to secure a very exotic appearance.

At first Peggy didn't like the idea and almost staged a walkout, but now that she's seen film tests, she thinks it is all pretty swell.

Bobby Montgomery is actually going to break down and sing a ditty in "Piccadilly Jim," his next MGM galloping tin type . . . H. M. Warner, the big boss of the outfit with his name over the front door, is figuring on bringing Vera Gordon back to the screen in "Your Best Friend," once made as a silent flicker. . . Harry Crocker scribbles off a hasty note from South Wales to relate that he's been chumming and tennising with Elinor Glyn.

Mr. Montgomery

The Rt. Hon. Robert (Bobby) Cunningham-Reid and his wifey, Mary, and the Duke of Sutherland.

George Hale, the dancing director, sends a picture postcard of a roulette wheel, and says he's stayin' in Monte Carlo until he gets even. I hope I'm not TOO old to recognize him when he returns.

John Larkin, Jr., has two plays getting Eastern tryouts this month. They are "Lovers Don't Cry Forever" and "Blood for the Moon."

Joan's Baby Costly

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15.—Joan Blondell's baby, expected in October, will be worth 10 times its weight in gold. Figure it out for yourself. Waiting for the stork will keep the star off the Warner payroll for nearly six months. I don't know what Joan's exact salary is, but $1,000 a week is a fair guess. Twenty-four weeks off the screen means a loss of $24,000 to the star. In addition, Joan and George Barnes are remodeling their house to put in an elaborate nursery.

DANCERS FIGHT, ONE SLAIN

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 18.—(AP.)—A dancers' argument at a night club opening ended in one man's death, shooting of another and four arrests.

Leo Ulrick, 26, of nearby Plains, died of a pistol shot wound in a hospital late last night a half hour after he bumped into a dancing couple on the floor of Anthony Bacevicius's night club. He was shot in the abdomen.

His dancing partner, George Baker, 20, also of Plains, was hit in the side by another bullet.

The night club proprietor and his three sons all were arrested in connection with the shooting. One of the sons, police said, fired the shots.

Thirty persons were in the club the police were told, when Ulrick and Baker, dancing together among mixed couples on the dance floor, accidentally bumped into a girl dancer and her escort.

The escort lunged at Ulrick. Baker joined the argument, and a general row developed in which the proprietor and his sons are alleged to have joined.

POLO FEATURES COUNTY FAIR

A horse show, horse races, a polo game and drum and bugle corps competition will be the added attractions at the second annual county fair at South Park on the opening day, August 28, the County Bureau of Parks has announced. In addition all exhibits will be open from 11 a. m. until 10 p. m.

In addition to the activities at the fair grounds, the new Joyce Kilmer Memorial on Catfish Run road will be dedicated at noon. This memorial is in the form of a traffic circle, surmounted with trees and a plaque bearing the words of his son, "Trees."

The horse show will be staged at 2 p. m. and at the same hour there will be races by members of the South Park Matinee Club. The polo game is scheduled for 6 p. m. and the drum and bugle corps competition at 8 p. m.

Entry blanks for the exhibitors are available in the agricultural display room in the basement of the Court House.

ASK MARGIOTTI TO AID TEACHER

The American Civil Liberties Union is preparing to engage Attorney Charles J. Margiotti to handle the case of James J. Stewart, Plumville High School teacher, recently denied a permanent teacher's certificate in Indiana County on grounds that he is a "Bolshevik."

Announcement of this was made by George E. Evans, chairman of the executive committee of the Union, following Stewart's appearance before the Henry George Club yesterday. In an address Stewart attacked the actions of James F. Chapman, superintendent of Indiana County schools, who refused him the permanent certificate.

He charged that Chapman, who has held his position 26 years, is not a college graduate, and is in no position to judge the qualities of teachers.

HEINZ PAYROLL AT NEW PEAK

More people are being employed in the plants of the H. J. Heinz Company in the United States, England, Spain and Canada than at any time since the company was established 65 years ago, it was revealed at a sales conference here yesterday. The conference is being attended by managers of sales branches in the United States and Canada.

Howard Heinz, president of the company, said that the visitors reported increases in their business during July, and that reports from European branches were of similar nature.

The conference will close tomorrow. Delegates were entertained at a picnic at the summer home of Sebastian Mueller, near Bakerstown, last night.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT NEWS

IRREGULARITIES CHARGED IN TAX COLLECTIONS

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Broadway night life these days is made up largely of those who want something more out of each evening that cannot give us. That small triangle of disillusion, Times Square, is every dreadly reluctant to bed. After 2 a. m. the Life of life has left its driftage.

Pert, enameled harpies patrol the pave, idling hopefully before windows. Dance hall opposite call from doorways. Seedy young men offer themselves as guides to this and that. All makes elaborate pretenses of cheerfulness for the wayfarer. There are out to snare the lonely.

Every great city has its baffled quota who dare not be alone with themselves. They gravitate to the bright lights to escape unrelieved sadness of their furnished room. Most have run from realities. Some are wanted by the law. All are in desperate need of companionship.

Thus such wan-eyed comprise about the only fuel for that thin flicker of night life flame. For the grifters picking acre scanty. A stay out with a ten dollar bill is considered a fast find. For his hour in the divers and honky tonks he becomes true prince of good fellows. A blood!

In early morning, too, New York nightly inspects its tunneled miles of subway systems. Trained men are unloosed to inspect every nut, bolt, lamp, signal and rail. They wander like explorers in an Egyptian tomb, peering, plodding. Their only hindrance is from mosquitoes that live the year around in the even temperature.

Grimmest of all night scenes are around the wharves when the cloudy world of silhouettes is relieved only by the moon's fish-scale patterns upon water. Any splash may mean suicide or murder. I went years ago with Hannen Swaffer to London's Limehouse in the foggy dead of a misty night. I had read deeply of Thomas Burke and everything was eerie in its shuttered trance. There can be no such things as ghosts, of course. But, while I sat on a wet pier end waiting for a police motor boat, a shapeless figure formed out of the void, reached out what seemed hands and I felt a chill touch on my throat. I swear it!

Taxi stands around congested centers at night are always high spots for the prowler. Elegant conversation interests me but passively. But toss me among the queer, disjointed, half-expressed confabulations of policemen, taxi drivers, grown up newsboys and others who move about at strange hours and I'm entranced. The only writer to set down such talk as it is has been Ring Lardner. It has an odd broken rhythm, sudden stops and rushing cascades. Half crook, half gutter, raw, vinegarish, whipping.

The water front diner is another fount of queer jargon. One must look shabby and wear a cap—Harris Merton Lyon once told me that—or everybody grows tight-lipped. A silk hat will desolate such a place in a scat. Many patrons in the cozy water front diners are potential Dick Turpins who hold secrets of the metropolis. The places smell of sausage, liver, gunpowder, coffee, damp clothes and cheap tobacco. The counterman is usually beetle-browed, shifty, soiled. You suspect rightly many ptomaines yet there is something about this helter-skelter food after midnight that zips a tangy relish. Often more so indeed than an after theater repast at the Colony, Ritz or Casino.

Every former morning newspaperman has a fleeting awareness of the army of newspaper wives when out late at night. Such ladies are the noblest band of martyrs, placing Daddy's slippers, pipe and perhaps highball in proper places before retiring to dream they had been sensible and married a rich grocer. A husband with no enthusiasm, who spins no rich dreams but who quits work promptly at 5 in the evening as married men should. Newspapermen are never that.

Fifth avenue is jubilant over the passing of the hideous, ghostly specter—the old Wendell mansion. Very shortly, the bleak yard where the toothless dog Toby waddled and the rust brown brick house alongside will be supplanted by the flashy red of a five-and-ten.

* * *

The down-town lion—Leo I think it is—in front of the public library could also stand a face washing so long as Fifth avenue is perking up. Just a fuss-budget! I'll be pouting with the Empire Building next.

PRETZEL MAGIC REVEALED BY FOOD MEN

Baked as Rings in Days Of Old and Worn As Amulets

Do you know that pretzels, present-day thirst urgers, had a special significance in religious ceremonies in ancient Roman times?

That at one time they were baked in the form of arm and luck rings and worn on feast days as symbols of good luck to ward off the evil influences of witches and demons?

That it was supposed by making a wish while pulling a pretzel apart, one's fondest desire could be attained?

That it was believed that pretzels strung on cords or willow switches and fastened to fruit trees would insure successful crops?

That in Switzerland they were apportioned like gold pieces, eight to each male and five to each female, on feast days?

DOG FOOD TAKES LEAD

Do you know that while milk attained the greatest volume in canned goods last year, this year's leading canned product is dog food?

These and many other interesting facts about canned and package foods came to light this week at the seventh annual convention and exposition of the National Food Distributors' Association in the William Penn Hotel.

This association spontaneously evolved as it became increasingly necessary to make speedy and frequently distribution of perishable and semi-perishable foodstuffs, according to E. W. Rosenheim, national president. He said:

"The growth in importance and per capita consumption of package cheese, mayonnaise, dairy products and many other foodstuffs which by their very nature must be marketed soon after manufacture was really responsible for truck distribution of merchandise which could not be sold and delivered through ordinary channels.

"The value of speedy and frequent truck distribution of perishable and semi-perishable foods in terms of human health and happiness, in terms of convenience to the housewife in the preparation of highly diversified and nutritious menus, has wholly justified the existence of this organization whose representatives have more than 8,000 trucks distributing foodstuffs throughout the United States.

"When the trend of food production went from the home to the factory, motor distribution was born."

ELECT OFFICERS TODAY

Election of officers was the principal event on the program today. The meeting will close tomorrow afternoon.

Walter Nichols, of Chicago, secretary of the Illinois Retail Grocers' Code Authority, speaking at yesterday's session, declared that the National Recovery Act code for the food industry is going to be permanent. He said:

"The NRA is the best thing that ever happened, and I am of the opinion that after the code swings into full operation the retailers and distributors never will want to give it up. The only trouble we find with the workings of the NRA in Illinois is that often the district men working for the code authority have not interpreted the code correctly."

The convention delegates last night went on a moonlight excursion on the river steamer Washington.

Gordon Will Sell Directors' Table

Women Flirts In U. S.? No, Says Girl

MISS VERA DAWSON

Thesis Shows Up Snap Judgments Of Frenchmen

Why the French opinion of the American woman is "all wet" is described by Miss Vera Dawson, of 4345 Andover terrace, in her thesis, "Opinion of the American Woman," written for her doctor of philosophy degree at Pitt.

Upon investigating more than 200 volumes she found these opinions held by many Frenchmen:

The American woman is beautiful, but her beauty is artificially achieved.

She is selfish, discontented, artificial and hypocritical.

In her clubs she works zealously for social reform, while at the same time she undermines her own home by her carelessness and negligence.

She is a poor mother and a selfish wife.

All American husbands are martyrs.

The "Yankee woman" knows only two things in her relation to men: flirtation, by which she escapes boredom, and marriage. She marries either to evade tiresome jobs, to acquire greater income, or for amusement.

Miss Dawson comes to the defense of the harassed American woman and says she has been misjudged. She says one Frenchman, after a week in an American hospital, went home and wrote a book on the subject which became a best seller in France. Another, a French reporter, spent a month in the underworld of Chicago and wrote of women from that.

Miss Dawson received the Kappa Kappa Gamma prize for activities and scholarship at Allegheny College, where she received her bachelor of arts degree in 1929. She took her masters degree at Pitt in June, 1932, and was granted a doctor of philosophy degree this year. She wrote "The Evolution of the Philosophy of Edouard Rod" for her master of arts degree. She speaks French fluently and is a graduate of the modern language department at Pitt.

406 'Little Beauties' Compete; Throngs Attend Event

Through a long afternoon yesterday hundreds of mothers and babies waited patiently at Olympia Park, McKeesport, until the last decision had been reached in the "pretty baby" contest, sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph.

The event was held in the dance pavilion, which was filled to capacity. The tremendous number of entries upset all plans for rapid judging, making it necessary to break each classification into several groups.

A total of 406 babies were entered. The largest groups were 150 girls between two and three years, and 113 boys between the same ages.

Sixty-eight girls and 27 boys between three and four years were competed, and 21 girls and 18 boys between four and five years.

There were 32 sets of twins—boys and girls—besides four sets of girl and boy twins.

THRONGS ATTEND

Between 4,000 and 5,000 persons attended the day's outing at the park. Thousands of free strips of amusement tickets were distributed.

POLICE CALLED TO STOP BELLS

Sergt. Al Heineman, of Oakland Police Station, today received his "queerest call" in 25 years of police experience. A Hazelwood resident called police to send the radio car to stop church bells ringing in her neighborhood because they disturbed her slumbers.

The bells rang to herald the celebration of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, celebrated in all Catholic churches of the world today.

The request was ignored.

Law of Supply And Demand Not In Constitution

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The Middle West got some rain this week, with almost eighty percent falling in the Democratic states.

The old guard will howl about partisan politics in the weather bureau.

But out in Indiana they don't care much what happens to corn, so long as it grows high enough to hide a gallon jug.

The sun didn't burn up all the crops. The A. A. A. beat 'em to it by plowing some under. But it was a good combination for making food scarcer and dearer.

Rotating the crops didn't make the crows dizzy. They got their share.

We have just looked up our history since 1776, but we can't locate the Congress that passed the law of supply and demand.

It ain't in the Constitution, so it must be illegal.

JOB LOST UNTIL HE REPAYS U. S.

Alleged to have been dismissed from the United States Navy as an enemy alien and to have refused to pay back to the United States government a loan of $363 obtained on a compensation certificate erroneously issued, Frank Konopasek, county employe, has been suspended by the County Commissioners. The suspension will be in force, the Commissioners said, until the loan has been repaid, with interest.

E. R. Benke, head of the Pittsburgh office of the Veterans' Bureau, informed the Commissioners that he had been unable to induce Konopasek to repay the loan, made in August, 1932. Benke's letter was part of a report on the matter made to the Commissioners yesterday by Leo A. Riordan, chief county investigator. Konopasek is an employe of the bridge department.

INTEREST FUND HELD LOST TO COUNTY

Legality of Certain Practices Questioned In Audit

Approximately $3,000 was lost to Allegheny County because of irregularities in making deposits of tax collections by the county treasurer's office during the period 1928 to 1931, inclusive, the County Commissioners have been informed by their auditors.

In a supplementary report submitted to Mayo & Co., the Commissioners were advised by the auditors to have the county solicitor pass on the legality of certain practices now in vogue in the treasurer's office, in view of making corrections.

The report indicates that nearly $22,000,000 was collected in taxes in the four years. It further points out that large amounts are paid to the county each year in interest on county bank deposits. The auditors showed that much interest was lost to the county because considerable time elapsed between the time the taxes were collected and when they were deposited to the county's credit.

DELAYS ASSAILED

Commenting on the delays, the auditors said:

"We believe that the long period of time elapsing before depositing thereof collections is unreasonable and unnecessary and leaves the way open for possible irregularities in accounting for tax collections at a discount."

The report revealed also that the late John Francies, one-time treasurer, retained approximately $4,742.93 collected for fish license tax and that additional commissions and penalties arising from suits for mercantile taxes totaling $3,844.32 were retained also by Francies. The auditors said that at the time they made their investigation they talked to Francies, who said that it had been a custom of the office for the treasurer to retain the "gain on discount" commissions.

FUNDS RETAINED

Samuel D. Fessler, former treasurer, also retained $1,703.74 from the gain on discount commission. He declared that he had used this money to reimburse office losses, arising during the collecting period, when counterfeit money was taken in and losses suffered in making change.

The auditors pointed out that there were 12 items totaling $700,000, received Jan. 1931 from the delinquent tax collector, but instead of these items being deposited immediately, they were not banked until from 9 to 317 days had elapsed.

ORGANIZATION OF INVESTORS HELD NEED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—In the United States in the last year and a quarter, we have seen much of government through the pressure of special groups — farm, labor, and even business management.

Mr. Rukeyser

The least well organized of the nation's investors, have had only a negligible influence. In the spirit of paternalism, the federal government through the securities act and the securities exchange act has sought to protect them from exploitation by unethical security vendors and manipulators.

But that is not enough.

Investment confronts other hazards besides fraud.

In the nature of things, business entails risk and business hazards have been heightened by the tall talk of young radicals at Washington and by the determination to push reform even at the expense of recovery.

ORGANIZATION NEED

The obvious suggestion is to organize investors into a powerful bloc, which can become articulate politically.

Perhaps this is necessary and desirable, but it seems to me that such an organization would be greatly limited in influence unless dominated by a highly intelligent and unselfish policy.

If it became an instrument for unenlightened reactionary policies its scope would soon be discounted.

Instead of fighting for narrowly selfish objectives such an organization should interest itself primarily in a broad gauged constructive national policy. It should stand for a balanced economy, in which goods and services can circulate with maximum freedom.

It should recognize that what is good for the country is best for business in the long term sense.

It should know that real, lasting security for capital must be tied up with a program of social justice for labor.

NATIONAL AID SEEN

A truly enlightened and progressive investors' bloc, with the proper organization for revealing research and fact finding, could become a significant influence in the national life.

It could challenge the half-baked proposals of the political and economic mind with a devastating array of facts.

It could appear in legislative hearings as the trusted spokesman for the thrifty and the industrious.

About a decade ago, I urged business management to recognize the importance of the rise of the small outside investor. I recommended that representation to such outside, minority interests be given on boards of directors. Such public directors could be watchdogs who would act as a check against the management.

A national organization of investors could set up the machinery for electing public men of probity and special knowledge to the boards of corporations.

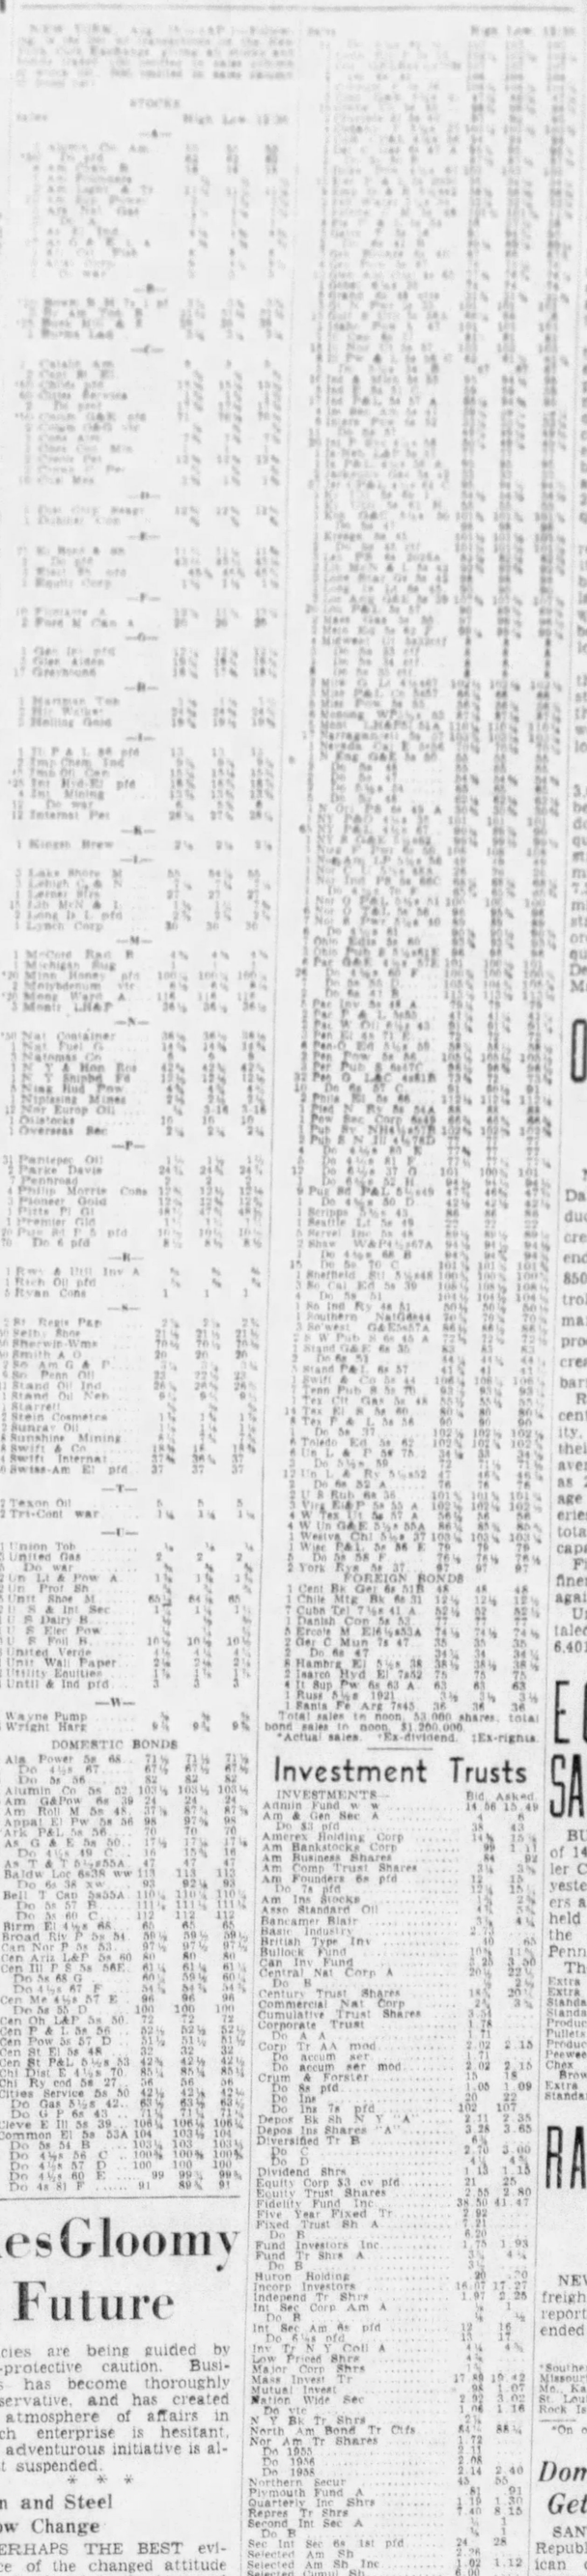
NEW YORK CURB MARKET



COTTON PRICES TURN WEAK

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Cotton futures opened barely steady, unchanged to 1 higher with steadier Liverpool cables offset by light rains in North Central Texas. October, 13.33; December, 13.47; January, 13.52; March, 13.62; May, 13.68; July, 13.76.

Houses with Wall street and New Orleans connections were among the more prominent sellers at the opening, but offerings were absorbed at the initial prices and the market soon steadied.

December worked up from 13.47 to 13.52 with active months generally showing net gains of 4 to 7 points, but this bulge met a little more liquidation and prices eased off slightly after the opening decline in the wheat market. At the end of the first half hour December was selling around 13.49 and active months were ruling within 2 or 3 points of yesterday's closing quotations.

The report of the Weather Bureau caused bullish comment, but it evidently failed to stimulate buying and the market was quiet later in the morning, with prices working off to 13.44 for December, or about 3 to 4 points net lower.

Liquidation was promoted by the easiness of grains, and a few stop orders were uncovered on the decline. At midday prices were within a point or two of the lowest on most positions.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 15.—Cotton, 3,000 bales, American nil. Spot in better demand, improved business done; prices five points higher; quotations in pence: American strict good middling 7.79; good middling 7.49; strict middling 7.34; middling 7.19; strict low middling 7.04; low middling 6.84; strict good ordinary 6.64; good ordinary 6.34. Futures closed quiet and steady. October 6.94; December 6.92; January 6.93; March 6.93; May 6.92; July 6.91.

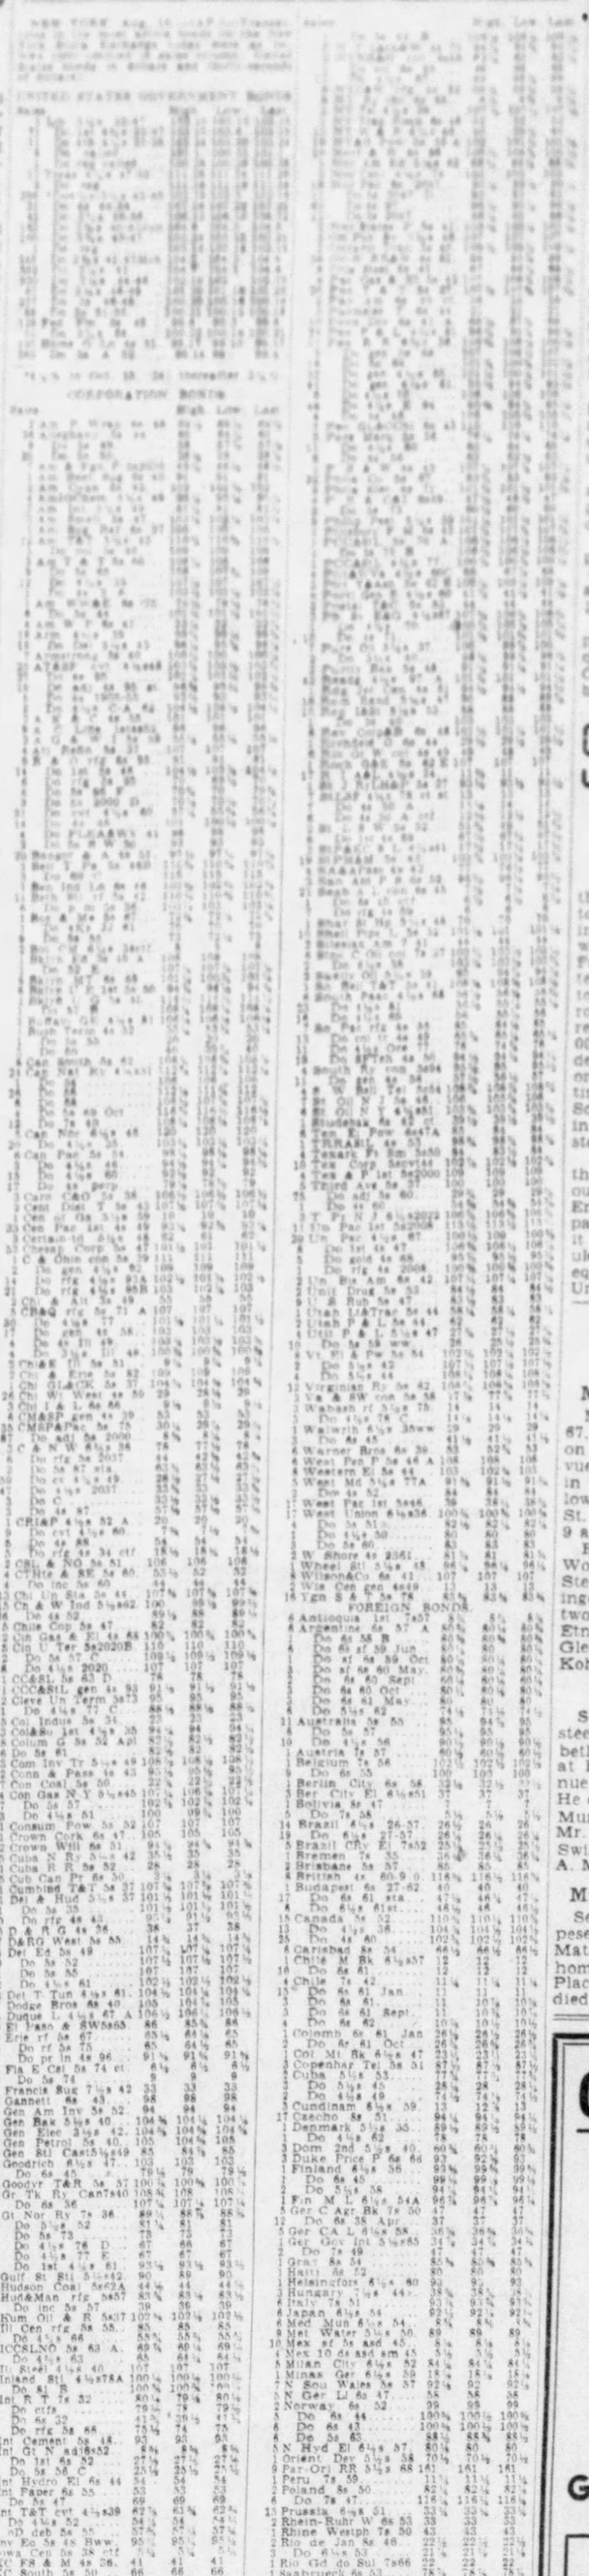
NEW YORK BOND MARKET



DOLLAR STAGES SHARP RALLY

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(AP)—The American dollar staged a recovery of 1½ cents to the pound today, closing at 5.07⅝ to the pound as compared to yesterday's close of 5.10⅝. It opened today at 5.08⅝.

A shipment of gold from New York was taken to indicate that there would be no further dollar devaluation, at least for the present, and this allayed recent fears and caused a heavy sentimental covering by short traders which, supplementing the trade buying, strengthened the dollar rate from the opening of the market.

A slight droop from the best price of the day, followed by a renewed demand including American purchases, helped for a strong close.

The French franc was steady at 76.28 to the pound as compared to the previous quotation of 76.24.

The price of gold advanced 1½ pence to 138 shillings 4 pence (35.18) a fine ounce and an amount valued at £425,000 ($2,141,656.25) was purchased.

The price of silver advanced ¼ penny to 21¾ pence, the highest quotation since the end of 1929. China offered less than America bought.

SOVIET WANTS STEELMILL

Confirmation of a report that the Soviet government is seeking to purchase steel mill machinery in the United States was obtained when United Engineering and Foundry Company officials admitted the company had been asked to bid on a huge installation for rolling flat steel that would represent an expenditure of $15,000,000. United Engineering is understood to be preparing estimates on a 72-inch hot and cold continuous sheet-strip mill for the Soviet which could also be utilized in the rolling of virtually any flat steel.

A Soviet commission is now in the United States inspecting various hot strip mills built by United Engineering for domestic companies. Plans for the Soviet mill, it was said, are such as to schedule an output of finished steel equal to that of any mill in the United States.

TREASURY GIVES SILVER ORDER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The Treasury has made public detailed instructions to holders of silver as to methods of delivering their metal under the new nationalization order to the New York City Assay office. The instructions follow:

If the silver is in your possession send it to the New York Assay office at Old Slip and South streets. If the silver is in a bank or an approved warehouse and you have the warehouse receipt, indorse the receipt to the superintendent of the United States assay office. Have this indorsement guaranteed by your bank or a commodity exchange clearing broker and deliver or send the warehouse receipt to the assay office. If the warehouse receipt is in the hands of your broker or bank, arrange for the broker or bank to deliver the receipt to the assay office indorsed as above.

If you deliver the silver itself, an advance payment up to 95 per cent will ordinarily be made at once and the balance will be paid after the exact value has been determined. If the warehouse receipt is turned over to the assay office, the advance payment up to 95 per cent will ordinarily be made within 24 hours.

The government will pay all proper delivery charges and will pay storage from the time the assay office accepts delivery of warehouse receipts.

The secret ballot was conducted under auspices of the National Labor Relations Board.

Gasoline Prices Drop at Chicago

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Low octane gasoline has eased further in the spot market under pressure of low priced offerings and is now quoted 3¾ to 4 cents a gallon, as compared with 3⅞ to 4 cents last week. Gasoline can be purchased for 3½ cents in East Texas.

Col. Ayres Takes Gloomy Attitude on Future

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

THE THIRD QUARTER of the year has become a period of general business recession, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Company, declared today in his monthly review of business conditions—one of the most gloomy of his reviews of financial and industrial affairs released during the depression.

Col. Ayres said that the first quarter was a time of rapid business expansion, security advances, rising wages, and most hopeful declines in the volume of unemployment. There was reason to hope that expanding business was on its way to taking over from government most of the burden of relief. Then in the second quarter the advances became slower, and by June the volume of industrial production turned downward a little. In the third quarter the declines have become pronounced.

Decline Exceeds Seasonal Precedent

THE VOLUME of industrial output has fallen by distinctly more than the normal seasonal percentage, according to Col. Ayres.

Unemployment is growing, and the burden of public relief payments is increasing in even greater degree. There have been rather serious declines in the security markets. Building construction, except for public projects, is at a low level. There has been disappointingly small increase in new private financing. Business sentiment is clearly beset by doubts, and its policies are being guided by self-protective caution. Business has become thoroughly conservative, and has created an atmosphere of affairs in which enterprise is hesitant, and adventurous initiative is almost suspended.

Iron and Steel Show Change

PERHAPS THE BEST evidence of the changed attitude is to be found in the iron and steel industry which expanded its operations, and made some good profits in the first half year, according to Col. Ayres.

Its best customer is the automobile industry which is still holding up its production well and buying large tonnages of steel. Nevertheless, the output of the iron and steel industry has dropped to less than half of what it was only seven or eight weeks ago. The decline has been caused by a general shrinkage of demand from almost every other source than the automobile industry.

The review said:

"Probably the most important cause of the slowing down of business is the drought which has become a truly serious calamity. Another factor of perhaps comparably great importance is the high cost of production resulting from the increased wages and shortened hours imposed by the codes. The restraining effects of high costs are evident in the small volume of new building, and they are reflected in many second-quarter corporation reports showing large volumes of business with meager margins of profits."

Oil Units Seek New Commission

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 15.—Strong pressure will be brought to bear by a large group of oil operators, both independent and majors, to secure the enactment by the Legislature at its special session on August 27 of a law creating a new oil and gas commission to take over the functions now performed by the railroad commission as to that industry. It is regarded as assured that Governor Ferguson will again submit the subject for legislative action.

BUILDING DRIVE SPURS STOCKS ONWARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Launching of the intensive home renovation campaign turned attention away from the so-called inflation stocks today to those of companies calculated to benefit from stimulation of building.

Recovery in bond prices and a substantial advance in the dollar following news of an export of gold were sound money signals to traders, and non-ferrous metal shares sagged. Commodity markets were hesitant, with wheat declining substantially, along with Liverpool, Rotterdam and other foreign markets. Cotton was barely steady.

American Tri-Ightline rose more than a point, on news of declaration of another regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share. Rails turned upward. New York traction's were again active and firm, but no definite developments concerning unification could be discovered. United States Smelting lost more than 2 points, and some of the other non-ferrous metal shares declined fractionally. Trading continued dull.

The ordering of another $2.25 dividend by American Telephone had been expected quite widely for it was reasoned in Wall street that the company would not cut the income of its 680,000 stockholders as long as it had large cash reserves. The $9 annual rate has not been earned in some time, however, and in view of the recent omission of the dividend by Illinois Telephone, a leading subsidiary, there was some uncertainty over the disbursement. The number of phones in use has recovered substantially from the depression low, but the company is worried by agitation for lower rates.

Wall street had been a little hesitant about buying shares of building supply companies on the basis of the home renovation and building campaign until the drive was a little further advanced, but it was said today that the way banks are lining up to make the loans was regarded as foreshadowing considerable business during the next few months. Any volume of new home construction, however, is not expected until next spring.

NEW SETBACKS HIT GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Sharp downturns in grain values here took place early today following material setbacks of wheat quotations at Liverpool. Corn belt rains were also a bearish factor, and so too were reports of proposed measures at Washington to prevent soaring of prices.

Opening ½@1⅜c down, December new, $1.03¾@1.04, Chicago wheat afterward dropped further and then recovered somewhat. Corn started ⅝@1½c off, December 77½@78, and subsequently showed rallies.

GRIMES ACCLAIMED BY FANS FOR FINE SLAB FEAT

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Grimes Teaches Lesson.
Two Big Gambles Win.
Tigers Pennant Bound.
Trainer Unseen Force.
Dope on Trot Tangled.
Amateur-Pro Difference.

Regardless of the parts played by Gus Suhr and other Pirates in the overthrow of Carl Hubbell and the Giants yesterday, the outstanding hero of the day was Burleigh Grimes. The remarkable pitching of the 41-year-old spitballer, in the first game he has started this year, was one of the high spots of the local season, and indicates that those who figured the grizzled veteran to be about done may have another guess coming. It wasn't only the brilliant exhibition he gave on the slab, but the fighting spirit behind it in a battle against heavy odds, that made Grimes impressive. Some other Pirates ought to find a lesson in that. When two old-timers like Grimes and Waite Hoyt, whose ages total 76 years, can set down the world champions and the best pitcher in baseball, younger men on the Buccaneer roster should note what can be accomplished with the right spirit.

Burleigh Grimes

A coincidence of the day was that while Pie Traynor took a gamble on Grimes against Hubbell, Mickey Cochrane took a similar gamble by starting Alvin Crowder for the Tigers against Lefty Gomez, of the Yankees. In each instance it was a case of "There's a chance that he'll win, and if he loses we'll have the other fellows' best pitcher out of the road without having wasted a regular hurler of our own." And both gambles won. That's taking a chance and getting away with it.

TIGERS' DOUBLE WIN LONG PENNANT STEP

Incidentally, the double victory of the Tigers over their only pennant rivals, stretching the season's record drive to 14 straight wins, may have come pretty close to deciding the American League pennant, counting in the probable psychological effect, helpful and harmful, on the leaders and runners-up respectively.

The Yanks could put themselves in the running again by coming back to clean up the remaining three games of the series, a tremendous job, but the task of catching the flying Bengals now is one of a nature rarely accomplished at this late stage of a major league flag race. Detroit today looks more than ever like the club of destiny.

BUYING OF CROWDER TRIBUTE TO CARROLL

That Schoolboy Rowe has been such a big winner for the Tigers, after an arm injury that had Manager Cochrane on the point of sending him home last spring for the year, is just another of the remarkable things accomplished by Dennis A. Carroll, trainer of the Detroit club. Alvin Crowder may be the next exhibit. The buying of Crowder from Washington through the waiver channel was a tribute to Carroll's skill. It was done at the request of the Detroit players, who asked that Crowder be bought because they felt sure that Carroll could fix up the pitcher's ailing arm. Al beat the Yanks yesterday.

Alvin Crowder

Admittedly baseball's best trainer, Carroll is said to know more about arms, legs and the rest of the human body than any other two trainers combined. Among the men besides Rowe whom he restored to playing fitness when seemingly dead arms had threatened to force their retirement were Charley Gehringer, Goose Goslin, Tony Lazzeri and even Manager Cochrane himself. So many players from other clubs sought treatment at Denny's hands that the Detroit owners called a halt and ordered him to confine his work to the Tigers. The latest applicant to be turned down was Lefty Gomez, Yankee pitcher. Lacking high-class replacements, the Detroit club has been saved by its trainer's magic from losing for any long periods this year the services of valuable regulars. The team's position is due to its great fortune in being able to keep its regulars in action. That's all the work of Carroll. He is the unsung hero and the real miracle man behind the drive that may give Detroit its first pennant since 1909.

FORM SHIFTS CLOUD HAMBLETONIAN DOPE

With the harness racing season reaching its annual high spot today in the staging of the Hambletonian for 3-year-old trotters at Goshen, N. Y., followers of the sulky sport, in trying to pick the winner of the $40,000 fixture, found themselves confused by recent form reversals. For a long time Muscletone, 2:03½, was regarded as the best bet, but later it looked as though there would be nothing to it but Emily Stokes, 2:04, when that classy filly won three straight heats over not only Muscletone but also over such other strong Hambletonian candidates as Reynolda, 2:03¼, and Bertha C. Hanover, 2:04.

However, another meeting of those trotters last Saturday week brought a different result. Reynolda won two heats in succession after finishing third in the first. Emily Stokes did not win a heat, finishing 2, 3, 3, while Muscltone placed 1, 4, 6. That leaves today's big stake up in the air, though the general view is that the chances favor a victory for either Emily Stokes or Reynolda. Marvin Childs, driving Reynolda, or Tom Berry, up behind Bertha A. Hanover, would have to upset tradition to win, as both drove previous winners and no driver has ever been victorious twice. This is the ninth annual running of the harness classic, which is named in honor of the famous Hambletonian 10, foaled in 1849 and considered the father of trotting in this country.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AMATEUR AND PRO

In some cases, the difference between an amateur and a professional in sports isn't exactly what you would expect to find. Davis Cup players, on returning from England, brought back to George Currie a story about a famous American woman amateur tennis player. She was asked to broadcast on a short wave hookup to the United States. "How much" she asked, or words to that effect. After a consultation the reply came, "Five guineas." The amateur star was to be on for only three minutes, and it amounted to almost $10 a minute, but she turned it down.

Suzanne Lenglen

The man in charge of the broadcast, an American, was desperate, so he hunted up Suzanne Lenglen, professionalized French star, and asked if she would carry on for him. "My friend, I am professional," said Suzanne in her best "Ongleesh," and, throwing an impulsive French arm about the radio man's weary shoulders, she added: "But you are—what you say—stoock (stuck)? Then for you I speak. It cost you nodding." The broadcaster says it doesn't matter that the clock went haywire and Suzanne didn't get a chance to talk. The important thing, to his way of thinking, was that she was willing. "That," he comments, "is the difference between amateur and pro."

Action Which Thrilled 4,000 Fans In Girls' Softball Battle

HELEN HOUSE, VANITIES, SAFE AT FIRST AS RUTH CARGO DROPS BALL MARTHA WARD SPEEDS HOME WITH FIRST RUN FOR SOUTH SIDERS AS CATCHER WIEDELI LOOKS ON

The Goldenson Vanities, of the South Side, qualified for the final in the girls' division in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament playoff series by defeating the Modern Food team, of East Pittsburgh, 15-12, before a crowd of 4,000 fans at the Peabody High School field last night. Martha Ward scored the first of seven runs which the Vanitys tallied in the first inning, and Helen House was safe at first during the same scoring spree when Ruth Cargo, guarding the initial sack, dropped a fairly high throw. These are Sun-Telegraph pictures.

STAR SOFTBALL TEAMS VIE FOR FINAL BERTHS

By PHIL GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary

Anthony (Bullet) Oskin, who established a pitching record that should stand for some time when he pitched the Campbell Shamrocks to three straight shutout victories and the Bracket III championship, will endeavor to enhance his feat when he takes the mound against the Welse Newsies, of Bridgeville, in the semi-final game of the playoff series in senior competition of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament today at Washington Park. In the first two elimination games, Oskin blanked Wilmore, Bracket VIII winner, 16-0, and Adams Bottles, 10-0.

The Shamrocks won nine straight games to attain their standing as one of the best softball teams in Western Pennsylvania. The Bridgeville entry has won the Bracket VII title and two playoff games.

The West Newton Scholastics and the Cecil Red Y's will battle for a place in the finals today when they meet on the Schenley High School Field in their semi-final round girls' division game.

TICKET SALE OPENED

Tickets now are on sale for the final elimination games which are to be played Monday and Wednesday of next week at Greenlee Field. These tickets may be obtained at the lobby in the Sun-Telegraph Building and at the downtown office at Fifth avenue and Market street. The price of admission for each doubleheader is only 25 cents. Ten-cent tickets will be sold at this office to players who are registered in the tournament.

The Senior Division champions will represent Western Pennsylvania in the national tournament at Chicago, September 8, 9 and 10. The unsold tickets will be put on sale at Greenlee Field the days of the games.

VANITIES VICTORS

The Goldenson Vanities batted hard behind Edythe Forsythe's pitching to qualify for the final round in the girls' division by eliminating Modern Food, 15 to 13, before 4,000 fans on the Peabody High School Field yesterday. Eva Spivak, who was scheduled to pitch against the Vanities, did not appear because of the death of her father yesterday afternoon.

Manager Helen Kasputis' Vanities took a big lead in the first inning by gathering seven hits and two walks to score seven runs. Mary Bartholemy climaxed the the big drive with a home run to right centerfield.

Fourteen-year-old- Betty McClelland battled hard for the Moderns, collecting three straight doubles. She played a wonderful game at shortstop. Emma Schall and Emma Kubasak hit home runs for the losers.

The C. J. Wahls got revenge by defeating the E. J. McAvoys in a return game, 6 to 4, yesterday at Wilson Park. Wilfred (Greek) Carrera pitched for the winners. He has won every softball game pitched so far this season. In another exhibition game, the Campbell Shamrocks traveled to Elizabeth yesterday and defeated the Elizabeth Produce team, 11 to 9, in a slugfest.

CORIA WINS TITLE

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE PARADOX OF THE CENT—A penny is one-twelfth of an English shilling and equals two cents in American money. Thus the U. S. cent is worth only a half penny, but, weighing 48 grains, equals two pennyweights of metal. THE BIG BELLOW MAN OF DANVILLE—By shouting so loudly that his voice was heard for eight miles around, and in three states at the same time, Lee Chrisman, 32-year-old Kentucky farmer, of Danville, set what is probably a world record. In th quiet and stillness of the early morning in the mountains that mark the junctions of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, Chrisman—an auctioneer by profession—climbed to the top of the pinnacle of Cumberland Gap at 3 a. m. August 1, 1933, and then yelled as loudly as he could. Listeners stationed as judges in each of the three states, whose sworn statements are in my files, said they heard Chrisman's voice echo through the hills and valleys for eight miles around.

TOMORROW: PARADOX OF HUMANITY.

BUCS' VICTORY OVER GIANTS PACKS DRAMA

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

"Old Grimes is dead, that good old soul,
We ne'er shall see him more"—
This grand old tune McCarthy sang
As he showed Grimes the door.
But when the Yankee pilot heard
The news—was his face red!
He murmured, "Grimes, like Pat Malone
Forgot that he was dead."

The greatest pitching feat of the season in Pittsburgh was on the lips of every Giant and every Pirate today, and Burleigh Grimes, 41-year-old spitball pitcher, was acclaimed anew by Buccaneer followers everywhere.

The New York and Pittsburgh clubhouses and the dugouts of the two clubs buzzed with comment over Grimes' great exploit of yesterday when the Pirates defeated the world champions, 3 to 2, with Carl Hubbell working one of his greatest games for the invaders.

Not withholding any credit for Hubbell, players and fans were willing to subordinate his rare slab work to the heroic Grimes, who had not started a game this season before yesterday. Burleigh held the Giants to six hits and gave way after eight innings of pitching to Pinch-hitter Roettger. Waite Hoyt pitched five balls in the ninth to retire the Giants. The score was tied at 2-all when Burleigh retired.

NO LAUGHING TODAY

The World Champions wanted to be polite and they tried to suppress smiles when Grimes walked to the practice rubber to warm up. Memphis Bill had Ace Hubbell primed and it looked like a pushover.

But today there were no smiles in the Giant camp and the league leaders did not need any incentive to be serious or downright solemn. Burleigh, however, was laughing up both sleeves.

MARVELOUS SLAB FEAT

Look at the technical side of the picture for a few moments. On the Pirate practice rubber was a spurned veteran pitted against the greatest pitcher in baseball. Small wonder the Giants, aiming

BOXING ALMOST 'EPIDEMIC' AS RING SPORT BOOMS HERE

TITLE BATTLE TOPS HEFTY PROGRAM

By JAMES MILLER

Boxing in the Pittsburgh district, once a sport almost overnight has grown to the proportions of an epidemic. Unless the fistic fans keep on the go, the promoters are going on the spot, cause.

The war has been cleared for the staging of the Teddy Yarosz-Vince Dundee bout for the world middleweight championship at Forbes Field on September 11.

Lou Brouillard of Worcester, Mass. former world welterweight and middleweight titleholder has been lined up to battle Ansley Green at Greenlee Field Monday night. Three six-rounders will complete the card.

Then for a while Jules Beck had a show on the agenda for tomorrow night at Greenlee Field, but called it off today in order to give the Brouillard-Green bout the right-of-way. Jackie Wilson, local Negro featherweight, was to have boxed Paul Lee, of Terre Haute, Ind., in the future battle of the double-header windup, and Truman Hughes, another Hoosier fighter, was to have met Tiger Joe Randall in the other 10.

ZIVIC MEETS FIRPO

Fritzie Zivic is to clash with Young Joe Firpo in the headliner of the Eighteen Division Veterans' Association show at Conneaut Lake Saturday night.

A dozen assorted simon pures are to exchange blows in the 12-bout amateur show to be staged for the benefit of the Police Pension Fund at Forbes Field next Tuesday night.

And what of Hickey Park' Weil Bus Vogel called off activities regularly billed for Monday night, in order that Jules Beck might have clear sailing for his Brouillard-Green battle.

The Yarosz-Dundee bout was lifted from the doubtful into the tickets-are-on-sale class yesterday afternoon in the offices of State Boxing Commissioner Dr. W. D. McClelland when co-promoters Vogel and Ray Babcock placed a certified check for $19,000 and another check for $6,000 in the hands of the commissioner, while Max Waxman, Dundee's manager, nodded nods of approval.

WAXMAN POSTS BOND

Waxman then stood up bravely under the formality of posting $2,500 bond guaranteeing Dundee's appearance at 160 pounds or less as soon as word was received from Ray Foutts, Yarosz manager, that he would follow Waxman's lead. Today the tickets were ordered placed on sale at the Pittsburgher Hotel and the Investment Building.

News dispatches from Worcester, Brouillard's home city, are to the effect that he expects the winner of his bout with Green, Homestead Negro whose devastating punching has won him the handle of Dark Destroyer, to meet the winner of the Yarosz-Dundee go. Last Thursday night Green belted out a great win over Young Stuhley, of Chicago, the gentleman who walloped Dundee.

The Veterans' show at Conneaut Lake Park, amply attractive in itself, is to be augmented with an exhibition by Yarosz.

NO-HIT WIN FOR LAFLAMME

Mid-Atlantic League fans are looking hopefully to Charleston today to cut down Zanesville's overwhelming first-place lead as the Senators meet the Greys in a double-header at the West Virginia city.

Although dropping a 3-2 decision to the Senators last night, Zanesville still has a seven-game hold on the league pinnacle.

Johnstown bettered its second place lead over the Huntington Red Birds by a 2-0 triumph over the Dayton Ducks.

The Wheeling Stogies far in the league cellar, sprang a surprise on the Springfield Pirates by lambasting them 15-1 behind the no-hit pitching of Red LaFlamme, former Colgate ace. The Pirates' only tally came in the fifth inning on an error, a passed ball and a fly.

Stravacros hit four consecutive doubles for Wheeling and then popped up on his fifth trip to the plate. But as he went to bat for the sixth time, he homered with the bases loaded.

Huntington and Beckley divided a double-header, the Red Birds copping the opener, 13-3, and then dropping the night cap, 4-9.

Pension Fund Ring Show Broadcast Topic Tonight

The Travord Seals of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports department will devote their weekly broadcast over station WCAE at 6:45 this evening to the Pittsburgh Police Pension Fund, which is staging a benefit boxing show at Forbes Field next Tuesday evening.

Jacob Dorsey, acting superintendent of police and Dr. William D. McClelland, Western Pennsylvania's member of the State Athletic Commission, will be the principal speakers. Vocal selections will be offered by the Pittsburgh Police Quartet, composed of Harry Lazarford, first tenor; Thomas Orsus, second tenor; John Houlihan, baritone, and Adam Block, bass.

Dr. McClelland has arranged an attractive program of bouts for the show and will reveal his list of matches over the air this evening, while Acting Superintendent Dorsey, one of the most active workers for the Police Pension Fund, will discuss the benefits members derive from the organization.

The program will be in charge of Alan Trench, WCAE announcer, and Julius Levin, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports department, who will serve as master of ceremonies in the absence of Harry Keck, sports editor, now on vacation.

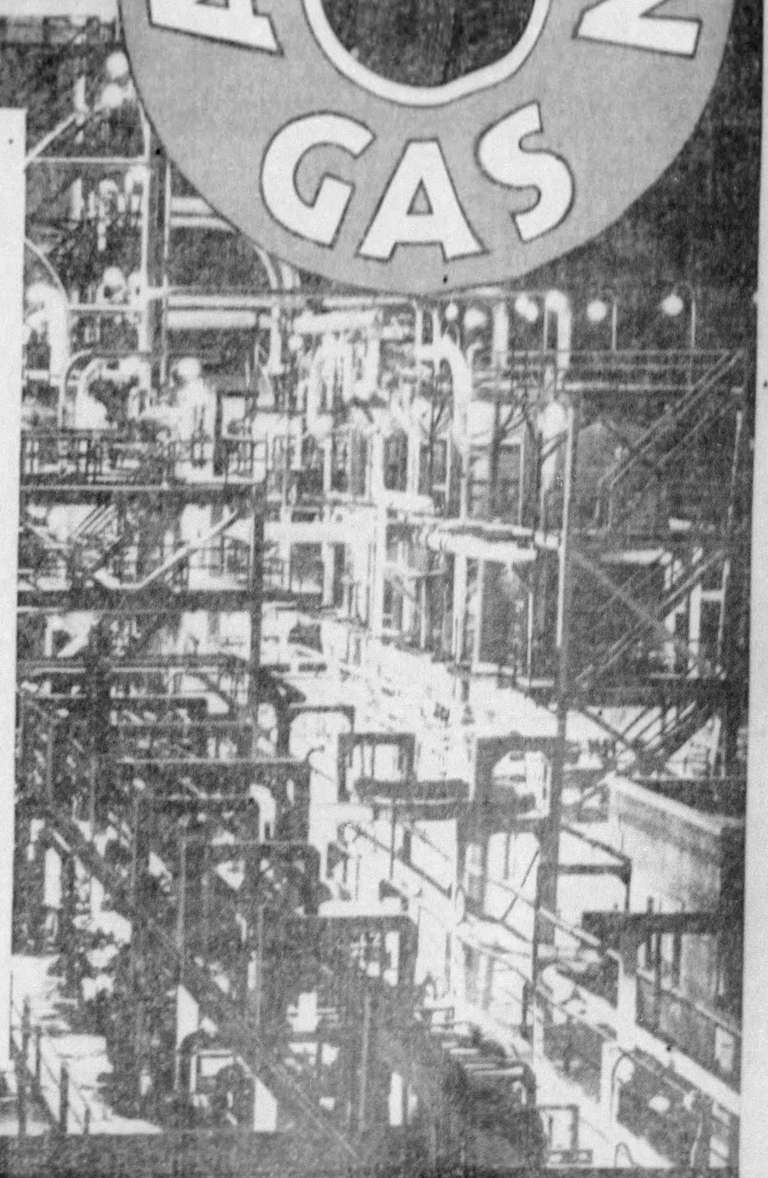
PROCESS PROTECTED BY U. S. PATENTS

AMERICAN ORANGE GAS



THEY'RE OUT-DATED because only the world's newest, biggest, most modern refining unit could produce "New-Action" Orange AMERICAN GAS. We had to build a new refinery to bring "New-Action" to you—no existing refinery equipment could do it.

This new refinery and our new and radically different refining principle, make it possible to convert more of the undeveloped energy in the raw crude oil into finished gasoline. It also gives "New-Action" Orange AMERICAN GAS greater SUSTAINING* POWER and means a better gasoline in every way a gasoline can be better—in anti-knock—surer power—easier riding—readier acceleration and lower cost per mile.

Get tomorrow's gas today! Say "New-Action" American and get action at any of our dealers and stations from Maine to Florida!

SOME INTERESTING FACTS

The refinery covers 450 acres of land.

It required an average of 2,600 men per day—a period of nine months to actually construct the refinery (aside from time consumed in planning).

The refining unit is the most modern in the world—adopting the latest discoveries and innovations in the art of refining.

An idea of the mammoth size of the refining unit can be obtained from the following:

1. In a single operating day, this unit will produce enough gasoline to run an average automobile 9,000,000 miles, or about 360 times around the earth at the equator.
2. Six 8-room houses could be set inside a single one of its furnaces.
3. One of its fractionating towers—most massive ever built—is as high as a seven-story building.
4. 40¾ miles of piping were used just in two furnaces to provide the required heat exchange surface.
5. This unit will turn out enough heavy bunker oil in a single day to produce, if used in making electric power, current sufficient to provide the home lighting requirements of a city of 2,000,000 people.
6. In addition, large quantities of kerosene, furnace oil for home heating, and gas are made.

TIGERS, 'TEAM OF DESTINY,' NEAR PENNANT

BENGALS BEAT YANKEES IN DUAL BILL

Associated Press.

Labeled a "team of destiny" as plainly as if the words had been sewn on their uniforms, the Detroit Tigers were riding the crest of the baseball wave today as they faced the third game of their important series with the Yankees.

Triumphant in their opening double-header with the second-place club before a record crowd yesterday, the Tigers had a 6½-game lead with nothing more to do than protect it in the three remaining games of the series. They boasted two more brilliant achievements which shone the brighter after yesterday's 9-to-5 and 7-to-3 victories. Their winning streak had been stretched to 14 consecutive games, just five short of the American League record set by the White Sox of 1906, and their young mound ace, Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, had his thirteenth successive mound triumph, three behind the league record in that respect.

With a crowd of 77,000 cash customers, one of the greatest in baseball annals, looking on, the Tigers twice performed their favorite feat of coming from behind to victory. After allowing their opponents five runs in the first three innings of the opener they blasted Lefty Gomez into submission to tie the score in the sixth as Charley Gehringer opened the rally with the first of two home runs he hit during the day. In the next inning Jimmy Deshong was pelted out when the Tigers again batted around and scored four runs.

Rowe was the biggest factor in the second triumph as he pitched four-hit ball and walked only one. But after Gehringer again provided a flying start with a first-inning homer, the Yanks were able to tie the count in the sixth when Lou Gehrig slammed his thirty-seventh circuit blow of the season. Charley Ruffing, who pitched the whole game for New York and struck out 11, failed to match the grown-up schoolboy in the last two frames and yielded three hits and two runs in each.

GRIMES PLAYS HERO ROLE

Terrific odds you say, but odds like this, to paraphrase the old Irish fighting song, would never dismiss the blood of a Grimes. And the fans who sat in on the first clash of the five-game series between the Pirates and Giants, witnessed a slab performance which is some respects has never been equalled in Pittsburgh history.

The first Giant run was so lucky it was painful: the tally scoring on a fluke infield tap by Critz with two out and the bases loaded in the second inning. Phil Weintraub's single, with one out in the third, was a handle hit and Phil tallied on Jackson's real triple.

From the third until he stepped aside for Pinchhitter Roettger in the eighth, Grimes yielded but two hits and only two Giants reached base. Burleigh was taken out in favor of the pinch man with the score tied which gave Hoyt a chance to show his stuff. Waite pitched six balls and retired the side in the ninth, and the Buccos, having deadlocked in the eighth, went out and won the game in their half on Lindstrom's double against the scoreboard. Vaughan's infield out and Suhr's single to center with two out. Hoyt was credited with the victory.

Gus Suhr was an outstanding hero of the game, what with two runs driven in, one scored and a couple of dizzy captures of potential hits on his afternoon's card.

DIZZY DEAN AND THE MISSUS: 'FLORIDA, HERE WE COME!'

Angered by the fine and suspension handed out to him and his brother Paul yesterday by the St. Louis Cardinals, for which club both are star pitchers, Dizzy Dean said that unless the penalties were removed he would take his wife on a fishing trip to Florida. The Deans here are shown with grip packed and ready for the jaunt. This is a Wide World News Photograph Service Picture.

DEANS FINED, SUSPENDED

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The truant pitching aces of the Cardinals, Dizzy and Paul Dean, may be back in the fold within a short time—if they don't decide fishing in Florida is more attractive than pitching for the St. Louis Nationals.

It's up to them, Manager Frankie Frisch said here yesterday. Although they have been suspended without pay and fined for not accompanying the club to Detroit for an exhibition game, they are free to rejoin the team whenever they see fit, Frisch said.

Disciplinary action was taken on the team's return from Detroit, Dizzy being fined $100 and Paul $50. On being suspended by Frisch Dizzy tore up their uniforms, then the pair headed for the office to get "paid off." But the treasurer told them to come back this morning, as this is payday for the Cardinals.

Sam Breadon, president of the club, announced he will back up Frisch in the action. The Redbirds' manager declared that he must have discipline.

CITY'S TOURNEY BID TABLED

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 15.—Bids from Pittsburgh, New Orleans and Boston for the 1935 edition of the United States Public Parks tennis championships were temporarily tabled at the annual meeting of the National Public Parks Tennis Association at the Hotel Andrews here this morning.

The matter of which of the three above cities will be recommended to the U. S. L. T. A. as battle site of the '35 event will be taken up at a special executive committee session later today.

Meanwhile, this morning's session voted the formation of a committee to draw up a proposal for the revision of the present somewhat nubulous working agreement between the parks group and the U. S. L. T. A.

The following officers and executive committeemen will govern the parks association for the coming year:

Joseph Suttner, Buffalo, president; Karl Raymond, Minneapolis, first vice president; Joseph Russell, Cleveland, second vice president; Dorothea Nelson, Louisville, secretary and treasurer, and Wintree Johnson, of Washington; Dawson Obear, of St. Louis; Paul G. Sullivan, of Pittsburgh; Dudley Shumway, of Los Angeles; Douglas Watters, of New Orleans; Edward Weisberg, of Boston, and Joseph W. Thurston, of Hartford, executive committee members.

Mrs. Jean Artzberger and Harry Wald, Pittsburgh representatives in the national tournament in progress here, both were eliminated in second round matches yesterday. Mrs. Artzberger was defeated by Elizabeth Kesting, of St. Paul, Northwestern titleholder, 6-4, 6-3, and Wald lost to Bill Lurie, of New York, 10-8, 6-3, 6-2.

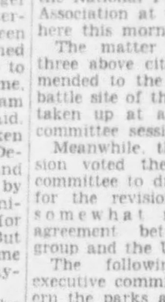
With two days of action gone, there has yet to be a break in the seeded ranks, though in the men's division Ted Drewes was pushed to 6-8, 8-6, 6-0, 6-3 yesterday by Kaseal Peckoff, of Buffalo, and in the women's, Helen Germain, New York hope and 1932 champion, was carried to 7-5, 4-6, 6-3 by young Betty Butler, of Des Moines.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

For several days now I have been trying to figure out just how much good the world at large is going to get out of that chap's attempt to cross the ocean in a 10-foot boat. And I have come to the rather sobering conclusion that, after all, it is such stunts that help to bolster the courage of millions of men and women. Just as when lots of fans go to the ball game and mentally make the home runs and fancy putouts, so will millions imagine themselves brave enough to try to cross the ocean in a bathtub, so to speak. Call it reckless or foolhardy, if you will, but somewhere, somehow, it does serve a purpose.



Honus Wagner

Regards,
HONUS WAGNER.

ALL-AMERICAN NET FINALE ASSURED

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—An all-American final for the women's national tennis championship appeared virtually assured Sunday with little Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., a top-heavy favorite to be in there Saturday against either Helen Jacobs, 5-foot two-inches titleholder, or Carolina Babcock, of Los Angeles.

With Betty Nuthall, of Great Britain, out of the tournament, beaten by Baroness Adalde Levi, of Minden, Nev., in one of yesterday's second round twilight matches, Miss Palfrey's path to the final was without a serious obstacle, barring a reversal in form.

Miss Jacobs and Miss Babcock were locked in the lower half of the draw along with Katherine Stammers, the English girl with a powerful free-style forehand, and Elizabeth Ryan, California veteran. Miss Jacobs and Miss Babcock appear destined to face each other across a net in the semi-finals Friday.

With three original group of eight seeded players reduced to seven by Baroness Levi's 6-4, 6-4 triumph over Miss Nuthall, the remaining seeded players had little in the way of opposition for third round matches with the exception of Miss Stammers who encountered Katherine Winthrop, of Boston. Their match was regarded as a toss up.

Miss Jacobs took on Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City; Mrs. Penlope McBride, of Short Hills, N. J., met Miss Babcock, and Miss Palfrey faced Dr. Esther Bartosh, of Los Angeles, in the other featured engagements.

AMATEUR GOLF LEAD SHARED

By TOM BIRKS

Knox M. Young, Jr., of the Shannopin Country Club, defending champion, and Bill Farquhar, long-hitting club champion of the Pittsburgh Field Club, led the early finishers in the qualifying round of the Western Pennsylvania amateur championship at the Field Club today, each posting a 77.

Right on their heels was Jerry Kraft, Field Club youngster, and Dick Brown, who plays from the Alcoma Country Club, with 78's, and from that score to the next among the early finishers there was a wide gap.

A number of changes were made in the starting times. Dr. Gregg, of Oakmont, the West Penn Senior champion, withdrew and George Ormiston, of Oakmont, and the veteran John Graham, of the South Hills Country Club, entered. Both are former West Penn amateur champions.

The players starting in the afternoon round faced a terrific rain and wind storm, which probably will send the scores sky high. Young was fortunate in that he finished just before the storm broke. Par for the course and the cards of the leaders:

George Craig led the field in the 18-hole medal play tournament staged by the Pittsburgh Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, over the South Hills Country Club course yesterday. Craig scored an 82. J. H. Hudson, of Uniontown, was second with 88.

J. A. Abramsdn, also of Uniontown, carried off low net honors with 94-20-74.

Two aces were scored at South Park yesterday. R. B. Wolf sank his tee shot on the 151-yard No. 17 hole and J. L. McLean dropped his on the 148-yard No. 10.

HAMBLETONIAN ON TODAY AT GOSHEN

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—The ninth running of the Hambletonian, bringing together eight of the country's leading three-year-old trotters in a battle for a purse of close to $50,000, drew a crowd of 40,000 to Good Time Park today.

A well-defined favorite at 2 to 1 in the overnight betting was Emily Stokes, owned by C. W. Phillis, of New York and a daughter of the 1928 winner, Spencer. The consistent filly was to be driven by Harry Stokes.

Raleu jut behind her at 3 to 1 were Princess Peg, owned by the Lale Brothers, of Plainfield, N. J., and driven by Seth Palin, and E. L. Mefford's Lard Jim, from Columbus, O., with Vic Fleming in the sulky.

Two other colts rated highly a few weeks ago, Reynolds, owned by Henry H. Knight, of Chicago, and Muscletone, carrying the silks of C. B. Shaffer's Coldstream stud, Lexington, Ky., had lost considerable support in late betting. Reynolds, winner of the American stake at Rockingham Park, was held at 4 to 1 and Muscletone at 6 to 1. Marvin Childs was assigned the reins on Reynolds and H. M. (Doc) Parshall was to drive Muscletone.

The other entries were Vitamine, owned by Martin B. Dodd, of Winsted, Conn., with Will Caton handling the reins; Bertha C. Hanover, owned by L. B. Sheppard, of Hanover, Pa., with Tom Berry as driver; and Ella Brewer, which Ben White was to drive for W. N. Reynolds of Winston-Salem, N. C.

FRANK SHIELDS DEFAULTS

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 15.—(AP.)—Francis X. Shields, Davis Cup singles player and defending champion in the Newport Casino tennis tournament, today defaulted a quarter-finals match to J. Gilbert Hall, of New York, the only unseeded player left in the singles competition. Shields has been bothered by his legs and he told tournament officials that his muscles tied up on him during his match with Eddie Jacobs yesterday.

Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, entered the quarter-finals by gaining a surprisingly easy 6-0, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, the new national junior champion.

Byron (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, gained the semi-final round by outlasting the fourth-seeded Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 5-7, 6-2.

RAIN DELAYS DUAL BILL

like a sprinter to snag Critz' liner and received an ovation. Manager Traynor was so anxious to make a double play on Terry's grounder he threw low to Thevenow and both runners were safe.

As Leiber came to the plate the players could scarcely see the ball, yet Gus Suhr had his eagle eye on it as he ran into right field to catch Leiber's pop fly and thus prevent trouble. French had two strikes and no balls on Slugger Mel Ott when the umpires called time.

The fans in the reserved seats were out of luck as compared with their brethren in the unreserved section, but the men and boys in the open left field bleachers took an awful pelting before they could scramble into the protected parts of the stands.

Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XXIII

There came the sound of stones clinking below the ledge that contained the pool. The head and shoulders of a man appeared above it. Another came in sight then a third and a fourth. As they clambered up and paused looking warily about Jerome muttered. "Ladrones . . ."

"What?" Linda whispered.

"Not so good. They don't look like bandits or revolutionists. This is some other crowd."

The men were armed with carbines and four machetes slung at their sides. The first to appear had also a heavy revolver in a holster. All were the conical wide-brimmed hats of plaited straw common in that tropical region and their costumes looked as if at one time they had been a set of white drill uniforms, whether for land or sea service.

Jerome and Linda were discovered instantly and the low but exultant cries at sight of them were significant.

Jerome said: "Tomaso at, ferez a reward for us. This looks like a tree-lape search party. Too free for my taste." He walked to the edge of the porch and called to the group that was not more than 50 yards away.

"Buenas Dias, Senores . . ."

They answered in kind and approached. Close inspection did not improve Jerome's estimate of them. He felt that while they were after the reward offered, they were also quite capable of raising—by several times—the amount offered. They were evidently boatmen, probably coast smugglers, he decided.

Looks Like Pirate

A man who appeared to be the captain was grizzled and might have earned more in a month as a motion picture pirate of that Spanish Main than he had earned honestly in all his life. He had a certain style to him and did not show the surprise he must have felt at sight of a powerfully built young man in Olympian games costume, and a beautiful young woman dressed only in bright blossoms. He bowed and said in Spanish:

"You are the young gentleman and lady from the yacht quarantined at San Cristobal, Senor?"

"Yes. Our boat struck a ledge and sank under us. We were obliged to swim."

"The boat was picked up awash more than a week ago. It is thought that you were drowned. But I, Captain Moriarty, knew better."

The Irish name struck Jerome, but he merely said: "You are right, Captain."

The man looked round nervously. "This place has a bad name. The sooner we leave the better. What were those cries a little while ago?"

Jerome looked at him fixedly and said: "Before we came here I did not believe in evil spirits. Now I am not sure. We have heard terrible sounds and caught sight of what looked like huge, black, hairy giants four times the size of men, slipping through the jungle."

The four boatmen quickly crossed themselves. Jerome asked: "Who has been living here? The island seems full of devils."

Cry From Jungle

As if to corroborate this statement a harsh voice cried from the jungle that was beginning to darken: "Well, what in blazes do you want . . ."

Again the four hands flew up. The quartet huddled closer. The macaw's cry had come plainly from a tangle so dense that a man would have had to cut his way into it. But apparently none of them believed it to have any mortal human origin. Neither did it seem to occur to them that it might have come from a parrot. In the evening hush the raucous voice sounded too loud and heavy in volume for that. Jerome hoped that the macaw would not show itself.

The captain said sharply: "Let us go. This is no place for a Christian."

"To whom does this island belong?" Jerome asked. "What sort of man?"

"Who knows? Put on your clothes quickly and come."

"I have no clothes. They were stolen by these monstrous beasts who must be his familiar evil spirits. Such cannot be killed by any bullet, except perhaps a silver one that has been dipped in bewitched water by a medicine man."

"Caramba! But perhaps you are right. Come then as you are. It is getting dark.

This was the last thing that Jerome desired. It would not do to risk Linda's safety in the custody of men like these. He was fairly certain that they were outlaws of some sort, and he had already seen how they were staring at her.

He said to the captain: "We must stay here until the owner comes."

"But why?"

'Held Prisoners'

"Because we are held prisoners by these huge beasts. As long as we keep close to the house they do not try to harm us. But if we try to leave the place they would tear all of us to pieces."

The man swore, but half-heartedly. "That is nonsense, and how then am I to get the reward offered for finding you?"

"I will give you a note to the senor who offered the reward, to say that you have found us here."

"That would not be enough. You must come with us. I, El Capitan Moriarty, am not afraid of anything—men or devils."

His unconvincing bluster was cut short by the cry of the Racketeer, lurking somewhere close in the edge of the jungle. Though by this time accustomed to it, even Jerome felt a shiver run down his spine. But he was quick to profit by the timely diversion.

"There you see? I am telling the truth. These devils understand Christian speech. There are half a dozen of them watching and listening. You had better go yourselves before it is dark."

One of the smallest men was shouting. He said: "The señor is right. Captain . . ."

"Silence. Take the señorita, (or the) Ramon, have your carbine ready. If you see anything, then shoot. Mr. I don't believe it all this.

From time to time on the edge of the clearing there came the tremendous thumping of Papa Gorilla beating his enormous chest. His fellow followed it. The gorillas were growing more excited. Perhaps their instinct responded to the hostile atmosphere and tones of argument that was growing tense and angry. Jerome had a sudden inspiration. He said over his shoulder to Linda, who was standing beside the door:

"Throw those halves of the forbidden fruit over toward where Old Man Gorilla's working his mad up. That may start something."

Gets Fruit for Gorillas

"But, Jerry . . . it may drive them wild . . ."

"Do as I say. Things can't be much worse."

She slipped inside. The captain asked: "What did you tell her to do?"

"To get some of their favorite fruit for the beasts. Perhaps it will quiet them."

"This is all madness," he stormed, and let out a stream of curses. "Tell her to come along . . . and you come without any more talk."

His last words were drowned by a roaring from both sides of the clearing, and the shriller cries of the young gorillas, who were frightened by the unusual excitement of their mother. It was a terrible medley. Jerome feared that he might be in danger of overplaying his hand. The great apes were plainly working themselves into a frenzy.

Linda came out with the two halves of the big fruit pressed together as it had grown. Even in the rapidly lessening light it glowed with a soft, rich, golden radiance. More curiously there emanated from it a perfume so pervasive as to reach even those who were not within a dozen feet of her. This odor was sweet and spicy, and held some aroma that was intoxicating like the bouquet of a rare wine. But even more, it held an odor that was exciting like that of blood.

The captain stared at it suspiciously. "What's that?" he asked Jerome sharply.

"A rare fruit. A forbidden fruit?"

Forbidden Fruit

"What do you mean, a forbidden fruit?"

Jerome said with emphasis: "It is the same with which Eve tempted Adam in the Garden of Paradise."

"Sacr'r'remento . . . but you are crazy . . . and you are making me crazy, too . . ."

"Senor Capitan," Jerome said solemnly, "as a former naval officer I have traveled round the world in these latitudes. I know all about tropical fruits but I have never seen one anything like this. No more have you, or anybody else. The magician who owns this island has traded his soul to the devil for the secret of how to grow it."

This bold statement brought a groan from one of the younger men. "Por Dios . . . that is why the place is full of monsters!"

But the captain was made of tougher fiber. "Devils or no devils, I'm going to earn my reward." He strode across the porch toward Linda. Not knowing much Spanish she had failed to catch the meaning of what had been said. Seeing that the men intended seizing her she rushed from the porch and out into the open, still holding the fruit. The captain hesitated but a second, then sped after her and caught her by the shoulder. Linda threw the two halves of the forbidden fruit ahead of her. They rolled to the jungle's edge. The captain started toward the dam, dragging Linda along. She screamed, then twisted about and struck him solidly in the jaw with a strong little fist. He loosed his hold of her. She tried to run but tripped and fell.

Jerome had started after the captain. He glanced back at the three armed men to see what they might be doing. At the same moment there came from the dark thicket not far from where Linda had fallen a reverberating roar. There was a crackling of stiff foliage and Old Man Gorilla burst out into the clearing. Monstrous at all times, the rapidly waning light served to increase his dimensions. Though partly stooped, the great ape loomed colossal, terrifying. Even Jerome was aghast.

The gorilla opened his huge mouth and roared. The dim light glinted on his outrageous fangs. He began again to beat his bulging chest. Then, further to increase the terror of the spectacle, the Deb emerged. The bush behind her crashed and the vague bulk of the Racketeer became visible as it skirted the shrub.

An agonized yell burst from the three who had remained at the corner of the porch. Up to this moment they had stood fast, no doubt afraid to run away. Jerome's statements had sunk into their superstitious sailor souls. It did not occur to them to fire on the brutes. They dropped their weapons, turned and bolted back to the ledge that formed the natural dam, and the dark mouth of the ravine swallowed them.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Last call for contest letters today.

This week has contest closes tomorrow midnight. What are your views about washing your ears and neck? We'll bet you have all kinds of good theories about that. So sit down now and write that winning letter.

Also make it good. The best letter will win one of those three prizes: $2.50, $1.00 and $.50. Because some one will get each of them.

We have noticed that some boys and girls who write letters have asked their fathers or mothers, or big brothers or sisters, to help them. There's no rule against this, but we think that the writers can tell pretty well when a Junior Patrol member doesn't write his or her own letters. And some more credit is due a letter that is written by the boy or girl without any help.

So go to write your letters the way you want them to be. Tell us what you think somebody else wants them to be, they probably will not be so good.

First prize winner in last week's contest was Josephine Soto, of 198 Beaver street, Lectonia, Pa. Second prize goes to Eddie McNutt, of 375 Grant avenue, Leechburg, and third prize goes to Kenneth Ruoff, R. D. No. 1, Jeannette, Pa.

Our congratulations to all three of them, and our thanks to all the other members who wrote interesting letters. What Junior Patrol members would like to do when they grow up ranged all the way from being policemen to being president.

And, by the way, Matilda Soto, who is a sister of Josephine, who won first prize, wrote a good letter, too. Shows that more than one member of the same family can write a good letter!

Boy: Not Wanted

Daily Short Short-Story

By T. TATUM RIVERS

Why, Tom, are you crying? That is not the child I was to get. I mistook the little girl with the blue eyes and golden curls for this one," cried Marcia Ware, her face flaming with mortification.

"That's what I told them, my dear," her husband said. "But there was a new girl in the office and learned that this was the child you meant for."

"She's crazy. You can take him right back," she shouted.

Tom Ware glanced out of the corner of his eye at the slight figure beside him. Jimmy Warren's face was very pale through the freckles and he was working hard to keep back the tears.

A regular little soldier, Tom Ware told himself. He'd like to wring Marcia's neck. But probably he shouldn't blame her. She'd had her heart set on a girl. He shrugged his shoulders resignedly.

"Come on, son. I'm sorry," he said.

Then went out. He tried to make conversation as they drove back to the institution. But the little figure sitting as straight beside him responded only in polite monosyllables. As they approached the orphanage gates he noticed that they were closed and locked. Across them was hung a placard on which appeared the word "Diphtheria."

"Well, I'll be darned! What do you know about that? The place is quarantined. You'll have to go back home with me, after all. I wouldn't take you there now."

"I ought to tell you, sir," the youngster said suddenly, "that I knew all the time that Miss Walton had made a mistake. I knew it couldn't've been me anybody wanted. Nobody ever wanted me."

Why, that's all right, son. We won't tell Marcia anything about it. But, by Jove, I want you. I'd be proud to have you for my son, if you could just make Marcia like you."

She accepted his explanations with a very good grace, and after dinner in the big dining room she played and sang for them. Jimmy listened and watched her for an hour, becoming absolutely fascinated, and when Marcia swung about on the piano bench he was fast asleep.

When the place was quiet she crept in. He didn't move even then.

He thinks you are so helpless that he were dressed out with admiration," her husband said with. Marcia let's take him. Being homeless alone we've got to keep him for a while and. You as well share him a good time. How about it?

Well, all right," she agreed doubtfully. "I'll go down in the morning and buy him some decent clothes and we can take him out to the lake in the afternoon. But he's going right back to the orphanage the day the quarantine is lifted and you needn't forget that. I don't know how my nerves will stand it for even a week having a noisy little boy around under foot."

On a bright April afternoon not three weeks later the superintendent of the Glentown Orphanage stopped her car before the imposing portals of the Ware mansion and rang the bell. A dignified maidservant informed her that Mrs. Ware was in the flower garden and had given orders that she was not to be disturbed. The militant Miss Bumpass stalked around the house and through a tall boxwood hedge. There she brought up sharp and stared in astonishment.

A flushed, dishevelled girl in striped cotton beach pajamas and a small muddy boy in bathing trunks were squatting beside a newly made pool surveying it proudly.

"Won't he be surprised when he comes home and we show it to him. I bet he couldn't make a better one himself. Marcia, dear, you made the little witch mad as anybody could."

Miss Bumpass gasped. It was Mr. Ware. Will Ware, her employer's girl could dare be the most arrogant and she dared remonstrate in her office more than a month ago. Miss Bumpass turned down the path.

"Mrs. Ware, I can't tell you how distressed I was when I discovered the most cruel joke had been made," she cried. "It was all due to that new girl in the office. I've come to take James back now. And I'll see that he is punished. He knew Miss Walton had made a mistake. And he didn't tell her many better. Go get your things and come on, James."

She grasped the small brown object in a firm grip.

Mrs. Ware's eyes flashed scornfully. She removed the superintendent's hand from James's shoulder and drew him to her side.

"Jimmy's not going back to the orphanage, Miss Bumpass. He's going to stay right there at home where he belongs, here with his mother and father. I'll be over in the morning to see you about fixing up the adoption papers. We'll like the little girl, too. James says he'd like to have a baby sister. Come on, son, and we'll walk with Miss Bumpass to her car."

Jimmy strode beside her proudly, but his head was turned away. He couldn't let women see him cry, even if his tears were tears of happiness.

HOLLYWOOD SCENARIO WRITERS SEEK INSPIRATION

Perhaps there would be less gangster content or gunfire if the public understood how scenario writers work on a plot that will pass the rigid requirements of the retreats Mays rule and win the Seal of Purity. In fact, the Hollywood producers go as far as possible to obtain stories that will be sweet and pure. They have arranged to take the writers out of sight sing. The singer will be unable to hear and used by the scenario writers' fountain pens.

A young man named Wade Bradford, aged about nineteen years, took a dose of carbolic acid on Tuesday, about sundown, owing to the fact he could not get a license to marry the girl he loved best. His parents gave him cream and mustard and he threw up the carbolic acid. He should be spanked well and compelled to remain in the house for a week. It is very foolish in boys to act that way.

A Little Star Dust Fops Things Up

Over on the ragged edge of Slovakia they claim to have found star dust.

The nearest we have come to that so far has been dandruff on a movie actor's hair.

Like radium, they have collected the minute grains from gold ore problematic. There's a suspicion somewhere that may prove where you find it.

So far they have collected 114 milligrams of the Reuters permit. Just about enough to sprinkle a one-egg omelet. But the smoke by an open window on a dining car and you will get some more material.

Star dust is ranked as the long jacket for element 85. It is one degree lighter than sun spots. The next element they will squeeze out of the scientific cuckoo-wringer will be moon suits.

Nothing is too far away for a scientist when he gets on his high bicycle. He will reach for the stars and pop them like corn.

We have collaborated with the Slovakian professors and they just ranked us a lot of uses for star dust.

One speck of star dust will make windshield wipers do a time step.

One drop of it in cold coffee will melt the spoon and burn off the last half of your waxed mustache.

Sprinkled lightly over a messenger boy's shoes it will cause him to leap over the commercial terrain like a gazelle. If there is an answer, you will have to issue him.

I will cause diplomats to tell the truth and start grays six years sooner than usual.

A dab of it on the head of a pin will illuminate entire cities in the daytime.

Drop a pinch of it into Vesuvius, and the lava will chase you across the Atlantic and through Mexico.

Use it to polish the handle of a bank door, and the president will stop taking roller skating lessons on the roof.

Sneak an iota of it into the Supreme Court, and the dignified judges will do a patter chorus like a red hot rhythm band.

This star dust is marvelous stuff. The next time you see a bob-tailed comet you will know the scientists are doing the summer slipping.

Council's Aid Needless

The Mayor Can Appoint a City Solicitor Without Calling a Special Session

Mayor William N. McNair's call for a special session of City Council tomorrow to act on his appointment of a new City Solicitor seems to have had little purpose other than developing that six Councilmen are out of the city during a recess in their meetings.

In the face of a practically unanimous contrary opinion the Mayor takes the position that he cannot make a recess appointment, despite the fact that a vacancy exists through resignation of Cornelius D. Scully. The Mayor, without attempting to get an opinion from City Controller James P. Kerr, flippantly says the Controller would not pay a recess appointee.

A mere telephone call from his desk to that of Dr. Kerr would reveal to the Mayor that he is wrong, but he hasn't time for such a simple action. Instead he cites the fact that the Controller refused to pay some city assessors named by the Mayor, and attempts to make this situation analogous with that surrounding the law department.

There is no similarity whatever. City Council and the Controller took the position that the Mayor had not observed the charter in either removing one group of assessors or appointing their successors. The solicitorship is vacant without any question of legal confusion, and the Mayor has the absolute right of recess appointment, and his choice would have to be paid.

It is odd to see the Mayor, who makes appointments to the Traction Conference Board with facility and futility, adopting this attitude toward the law department. His own experience as a lawyer, which he cites so frequently, should tell him he is wrong. If he needs corroboration, he might get an opinion from his equally qualified lawyer-secretary, Mr. Moritz, even though the latter admits he is not "heavy" enough to be City Solicitor.

The sad thing, from the Mayor's standpoint, is that many of his acts are becoming so tiresome they now often fail to make the first pages of the newspapers, and some are not published at all.

Gov. Murray's Judgment

He Lacks Faith in the Brain Trust and Urges Development of Private Industry

Gov. William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, in a recent interview, contributed some very sensible observations on the New Deal.

The write-up men who interviewed the Oklahoma Governor are usually struck with his informality and simplicity, his disordered garb and homely phrases.

There is, however, something HOMLIER about him than his careless dress and his unstudied speech. He has a homely wit, a homely judgment and a lot of that horse sense which is so characteristic of the great mass of Americans and the explanation of their strength.

No state in the Union has suffered more than Oklahoma from the drought, and yet the Governor does not consider this withering visitation to be the crowning calamity or even the chief problem of his people.

He sees the farmer's plight as due to causes which are very different and far more complicated.

"We shall never be able," says Gov. Murray, "to alleviate this economic paralysis until private enterprise and industry are again developed."

He sees that the enterprises of the ordinary citizen must be restored to his own hands; and that we can never have a true recovery so long as the government pays a wage for able-bodied men greater than that which prevails in the community where he lives.

To do so merely gives rise to the belief on the part of the workers that the government will support them and that they need not support themselves. General bankruptcy, including the bankruptcy of the government, he predicts as the ultimate outcome.

This hard-handed and hard-headed American, who has risen by his own exertions to the governorship of a great state, has little patience with the bureaucratic omniscients who are attempting, with such scorn for our humble understanding, to rule our ways—even to the point of rescinding the laws of nature, where the latter are found to be in conflict with their theories.

"It is not enough for bureaus in Washington to have good intentions," said he. "They must have practical knowledge, practical plans and methods.

"ALL THESE ARE LACKING NOW!"

The Democratic Governor of Oklahoma, in the light of such utterances, can hardly now escape being dubbed a REACTIONARY OBSCURANTIST.

Perhaps Prof. Tugwell will fasten upon him some of his proprietary epithets such as "infantile," "indecent" and "tory." The Tugwell branding iron seems to be working overtime just at present, and his epithets are flying in every direction.

But the people of the United States—the plain Americans—are very apt to feel that Gov. Murray has said just what they have been thinking for a long time, and that he has expressed a judgment on the tinkers and regimenters, the perplexed brain-trusters and the baffled professors, which is rapidly becoming THE JUDGMENT OF THE COUNTRY.

Tax Relief in Forests

Profits From the Public Timberlands Will Increase As the Years Go By

Pennsylvania during the last quarter of a century has acquired 1,647,881 acres of state forests. The announcement that a Pennsylvania paper mill, which has been importing wood from other states, is preparing to obtain its supply from the state forests is a reminder that these timberlands will some day yield a handsome profit to the citizens and help to reduce taxes.

At the time when a bond issue was being agitated for the purchase of five million additional acres of state forest—a plan that failed—Gifford Pinchot, then Commissioner of Forestry, said that in 50 years the state forests could be made to yield annually a supply of lumber equal in value to the entire annual cost of public education.

It has been the policy of the Commonwealth to buy cut-over and waste land for forest purposes. It takes half a century for trees to reach saw-long size; but the announcement in regard to the paper company reveals that many of the state forest trees are well on the way.

The Shepherd of the Flock

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Don't 'Just Live for Today'

"How are you doing, Bill?" I said.

Bill gave me one of those queer, empty looks one sees so often nowadays. As if he wondered whether it was worthwhile answering the question . . . wondered, indeed, whether anything was worthwhile doing. The sort of look a man may get after he's been alone on a desert island a year or so—

"Oh, so-so," he shrugged, at last.

"Haven't you got a job?"

"Ye-ah," he drawled "Kinduva job. Guess it woulda been a good enough job, back in the old times. But you know how jobs are now. Never know what'll happen. Don't do to make plans. Something's apt as not to come along and change everything the next minute. You just gotta take things as they come. Live for the day—"

"Living for the day." Once upon a time that was held to be a certain sign of "shiftlessness." Now it's fast becoming a national philosophy. And of all the vicious effects of the depression that's the worst.

Something deeply demoralizing happens when we begin to live "just for today." It isn't merely that we become careless and lazy, but a certain purpose and pride go out of life.

"What's the use of struggling," you say to yourselves, "If I can't count on anything ahead?"

But you CAN count on something ahead. Even though our private fortunes were to be hopelessly wrecked, even though business were to be shot to pieces and government itself demolished, there is still something ahead.

YOU, YOURSELF, ARE AHEAD.

YOU are not finished. Your money may be finished—your job, your social security, every outward circumstances of your life . . . but that questing, adventuring spirit which is You, is not finished. It is not bounded by one day's horizons. It's future does not depend on the rise or fall of political parties.

YOU, YOURSELF, GO ON. Everything else may seem to have come to a dead end—but YOU haven't. You are as exciting a problem today as you ever were. You are as filled with adventure and challenge. You are as worthy as ever of all your dreams and rebellions and struggles and crusades.

And, strangely enough, no matter how hopeless everything seems, IF YOU WILL KEEP UP THE STRUGGLE, IF YOU WILL CONTINUE TO HOPE AND DREAM AND REBEL, SOMETHING WILL HAPPEN.

Man is an amazing creature. He can really lift himself by his own bootstraps! You may seem entirely busted. You may think you have exhausted every prospect. But if you will act as if there were large things ahead, and go on making the gestures, YOU WILL FIND THERE ARE. That isn't a mere Pollyanna platitude. It's a deep truth, and never yet has it failed. If you insist upon having a future, you'll have one. It may not be exactly the future you desired. But it will have in it, somewhere, the making of happiness and pride.

On the other hand, if you want to sit down and stew in your own juice, nobody'll stop you. And 10 years from now you'll be exactly where you are today. Only more so. Which I suspect, is one of the things that ails us all at present. We've come to a bewildering interval when we can't look ahead—when we no longer know the answers. So instead of going through the gestures, we're "living for today" and "waiting for something to turn up." But it won't.

Don't live from day to day—nor even from year to year. Plan endlessly — hope boundlessly — LIVE AS THOUGH YOU HAD ALL ETERNITY TO STRUT YOUR STUFF! And if you haven't? Well, you'll at least have had a kick out of trying.

THOSE WHISPERERS

By Winifred Black

THE MAN with the newspaper route went home pretty tired the other night.

"I had to let the smartest boy I have go," he said. "He's a whisperer—always getting off in a corner with two or three other boys and whispering and then coming around so nice and smiling—but the other boys don't smile any more! I hated to let him out, he's smart all right and the mother's sick and he needs the work, but he would have the whole crowd disorganized in another week."

We all looked at each other in amazement.

Why the boy isn't more than 12 years old!

Some day everybody will be wondering why he doesn't go farther in the world. He's good looking, well mannered, as bright as a button and there isn't a lazy bone in his body. But he's a whisperer—and that's that.

I know a woman who's a "whisperer."

She whispered herself out of her club in town and she whispered herself into quarrels with her best friends, and now she has gone with her husband to live in a small town where he has rather a large investment.

She'll have a grand time in the small town—for a few months. She's a good dancer, she sings well, she can make one of the best salads you ever tasted, she plays a good hand at bridge, she makes all her own clothes, and they look as if they had come from Paris when she puts them on. And she knows just exactly what to say to the conceited woman and how to meet the diffident woman and just what to say to the minister's wife.

Everybody will like her—at first. The young women and the old women, and oh, of course, the men.

And before she has been there six months there will be a row in the church choir and the minister's wife will have an argument with the wife of the richest parishioner, and the chief Boy Scout will resign from his unit and the ladies of the church will decide that they won't have the ice cream festival this year, everybody is so sort of "edge-ways."

I know another woman who's a whisperer. She is a business woman and she says everybody in her office are jealous of her.

And so they are—or so she tries to make them.

It's a pity, isn't it?

The "whisperer" will go to her grave believing that she never had a chance in that organization.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

These Modern Gals

It has almost reached the point where a screen star or a society woman feels that she will be regarded as a piker if she has had only one husband in her life.

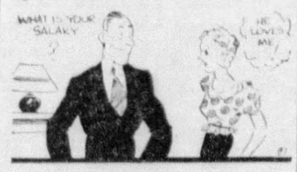
A quicker method of reducing, than by going on a lettuce- and-pineapple diet is to fall in love and worry yourself thin wondering where some man IS, nights.



A girl used to know that a man was thinking of marriage when he began asking how little she could live on; but now, she can never be sure that his intentions are serious, until he begins asking how much salary she's getting.

The modern young man is awfully tired of being mauled and petted—but he has not yet reached that state of defiance where he feels that he ought to slap a girl for kissing him, unexpectedly.

* * *

There will always be some people who will marry for adventure—just as there will always be some who will pull the trigger to prove that the gun isn't loaded.

* * *

A man loves to keep up the illusion that he is "just a boy" in mind and heart; but, while a woman may lie about her age and dye her hair like Joseph's coat, she will never concede that she is mentally in the infant class.

* * *

The more a woman forgives a man's unfaithfulness, the more he fancies she loves him; but, alas, no woman can be philosophical about the other women in her husband's life until her love has gone completely dead.

A married man, says Reno Ruth, is one who gets a glance at his salary check, before it passes on to the landlord, the baby-doctor, the milliner, the grocer and the beauty-parlor.

The average man has reached that stage where he doesn't know whether to treat a girl as a lady, as an enemy, as an equal or as just a pal.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Life Is a Wind

Life is a wind that comes blowing, blowing
Over the rim of eternity;
There is no promise or hope of knowing
Whither this wind blows, fast and free.

Some, as the gale goes by, are voicing
Cries of rapture and of delight;
Others laugh and their notes, rejoicing,
Drift like butterflies in their flight.

Some are in mad defiance shouting
Fury and folly into the blast,
Wildly challenging, feebly flouting
Faith and truth as the wind blows past.

Life is a wind which on viewless pinions
Bears the symphony made by Earth's throng
Into some far, unguessed dominions;
Threat and merriment, prayer and song.

Will Rogers Says:

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Got my American swimmers turned over on their backs last night and they broke a world's record and won three out of six final events. We are coming back in swimming Olympic games. Spoils System Wrecking Faith in New Deal

By James T. Williams, Jr.

FAITH OF the American people in the squareness of the New Deal will not definitely survive the outdistancing crowd of the spoils system throughout the federal service.

Upon the theory that the country faced a crisis like unto that of war, President Roosevelt began his administration with an appeal for an adjournment of partisan politics for the duration of the emergency. He enlisted the support of political friends and foes alike in the enactment of his legislative program of emergency measures to meet the challenge of the crisis for which the depression was held to blame.

For the most part, his legislation was enacted during the first year of his administration with a minimum of partisanship. Its avowed purpose was to afford immediate relief for all Americans in need of relief, to save the hungry from starvation, to give shelter and clothing to the destitute, to provide work for the unemployed and to protect the home owners and the rent payers from eviction and foreclosure.

So concentrated was the public mind upon the humane provisions of this vast program of relief that little attention was paid at the time to the assembling of political machinery to administer these so-called emergency laws.

Laws Administered Under Spoils System

ONLY in recent months has the country become conscious of the fact that although this emergency legislation was enacted with a minimum of partnership, it is being administered upon the sordid theory enunciated in the old slogan that " to the victor belongs the spoils."

In fact, the multiplying victories of the spoilsmen under the so-called New Deal administration are one of the most surprising and sinister developments of the times. It is estimated that approximately 90,000 positions created by Congress as a part of the emergency program to combat the depression and relieve the destitute have been filled by the spoils system instead of by the merit system of civil service examination.

According to official figures of the United States Civil Service Commission, there were in March, 1933, when President Roosevelt entered power, 110,000 federal officeholders outside the civil service. This number has grown until it is now approximately 199,000.

Of the many emergency organizations created by Congress upon recommendation of the President in the past 15 months, nearly all of them have been exempted in whole or in part from the operation of the competitive requirements of civil service laws.

In other words these agencies have for the most part been manned by the spoils system and in complete disregard of the merit system. These offices have been filled not by honest examination to determine the fitness of the applicant for federal service, but upon the recommendation of state and county, and local politicians who make up the vast horde of political spoilsmen throughout the country.

These emergency organizations which ought to have been filled by the merit system but have been, ever, filled in whole or in part include the following:

National Recovery Administration, Public Works Administration, Civil Works Administration, Federal Emergency Relief Administration, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Farm Credit Administration, Emergency Conservation Administration, United States Employment Service, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Federal Securities and Exchange Administration, Federal Alcohol Control Administration, Emergency Railroad Administration, Federal Communications Commission and Railroad Retirement Commission Board.

Raids Made On Other Bureaus

BUT THE spoilsmen have not been content with the distribution of newly created offices. They have organized successful raids on established agencies which were operating until 15 months ago under the merit system.

Secretary Roper began his administration of the Department of Commerce by turning the spoilsmen loose upon the Bureau of Standards. Some of its most expert employes were dismissed and their places filled by the spoilsmen in the favor of Mr. Roper. He followed this up by debauching the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce to the most sordid uses of the spoilsmen. Its veteran experts were dismissed right and left until that agency as now operated is largely dominated by the spoils system.

The same thing has been going on in the Department of Justice, the Department of Labor, the Department of the Interior. And from the beginning, the spoilsmen have made their headquarters in the Postoffice Department, where as Postmaster General the chairman of the national committee of the party in power has his headquarters.

How long this condition will be allowed to continue depends upon the initiative of Presirent Roosevelt and the patience of the people. He can halt the raids of the spoilsmen whenever he elects to do it. If he delays doing it much longer, the force of the public sentiment against demoralization of the federal services by the spoils system will prove too strong for even the most popular Presirent in recent years to ignore, much less to resist.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

It is probable that you envy successful men.

You forget their success has been due to many sacrifices.

They have had to deny themselves many of the things which you have enjoyed because they did not have the time. Your sort of amusement would have diverted them from success.

Often they have had to sever happy friendships to win success.

Time and attention are necessary to maintain friendships.

Frequently, success means undermining of health and contracting of disease which brings discomfort to the afflicted.

Success is never cheap, nor is it ever simple.

Success is peremptory in demands and will not tolerate interference.

Also, success often wrecks happiness in a very personal way.

Those who get the most out of success are those who gain the greatest pleasure from what they are able to attain.

Like the miser who gets satisfaction from seeing and fingering his gold, many men count the joy of success in enumerating with what they have accomplished, forgetting the sacrifices.

And now do you envy the successful men?

They also serve who only stand and wait.

Courtesy on one side only lasts not long.

Fools make feasts, and wise men eat them.

Consider well before you tie the knot you never can undo.

It is better to forget one's misfortunes than to talk about them.

When it comes to feathering their own nests, some people aren't so ticklish.

About the only thing that can't be purchased on the easy payment plan is experience.

Even taking time by the forelock isn't going to enable you to catch up with tomorrow.

The slow driver may be a menace on the road, but you don't find him cracking off any telephone poles or crashing into plate glass windows.

The Sultan of Sulu, Picturesque Character, Is Refused a Seat In the Philippine Senate

By Edwin C. Hill

GOV. GEN. MURPHY, of the Philippines, has denied to the 71-year-old Sultan of Sulu a seat in the Senate of the islands, an honor which the lively old Sultan had enjoyed for a good many years. Little is left to His Royal Highness Hadji Mohammed Jamalul Kiram II, titularly ruling over 500,000 warlike Mohammedans, but religious authority. He is the head of the Mohammedan religion in the 250 islands which make up the Sulu Archipelago, but the United States has taken away his political authority in the Southern Philippines, and the British have eased him out of power in North Borneo.

It was away back in 1899 that the American authority in the islands collided with the Sultan of Sulu, capturing his capital, Jolo, after severe fighting. But diplomacy and horse sense displayed by Gens. Pershing, Leonard Wood and Robert T. Bullard has as much to do with subduing the fighting Moros of Sulu as American bullets and bayonets. His political power disappeared nearly 20 years ago, but he has drawn a pretty nice pension from both the British and American governments — $3,000 from Uncle Sam and about the same from John Bull—which, together with his rake-off on various concessions, brings his income up to about $15,000.

Sultan Enjoys Color and Gayety

HE'S A GAY old boy, the Sultan, fond of bright colors and pearls and inclined to make whoopee, after the Moro fashion. Years ago, I think it was in 1910 or 1911, he visited the United States and made colorful copy for us reporters, and one of his nieces had lived in this country for years.

William Jennings Bryan, touring the Philippines, called upon Uncle Sam's pet Sultan of Sulu one day and received a shock. Chatting with his highness Jamalul Kiram the Second, whom George Ade had joked about in the musical comedy, "The Sultan of Sulu," Mr. Bryan happened to glance at the ceiling, and was horrified to see crimson drops dripping through the cracks in the boards. He recalled that Mrs. Bryan had been escorted upstairs to the harem and started to his feet in alarm, but the interpreter smilingly reassured him. The red drops were not human blood, but the juice of the betel nut. The ladies of the Sultan's harem were merely refreshing themselves chewing the nut, which corresponds in that part of the world to our American chewing gum.

And now the Sultan's adopted daughter, Princess Tarhata, lays claim to some 14 islands of the Sulu group, lying between the Philippines and Borneo and owned by the British and the Dutch. The Princess, by the way, was educated in the University of Illinois, but went native in thorough-going style when she returned to the Far East.

There are 400 islands in the Sulu group, most of which we took over from Spain. Some of the finest pearls come from there.

Chinese General Ma Is Moe Cohen

COMES WORD from Manchuokuo, Japan's Asiatic mainland bulwark against Soviet Russia, that a plot to assassinate the mysterious General Ma has been foiled. The "flash" serves at least to establish one point—that the elusive and extraordinary military personage of war-torn China is alive and seemingly quite able to keep the breath in his solid person.

Many times in past years the name of General Ma of the Chinese Nationalist Army dotted the headlines of the news. We read a lot about General Ma when the Japanese guns were thundering at Shanghai, and pictured him, probably, as a lemon-tinted Oriental with a Mongolian ancestry stretching back to Confucius. But General Ma, distinguished Chinese military leader that he is, is really Moe Cohen, born in the Ghetto of London's East Side, and as much a follower of the Jewish faith today as when he was a boy in Whitechapel.

Born 49 years ago, young Moe Cohen trekked off to Canada at the age of 16 to make his fortune. In and around Vancouver he was clerk, farmhand, peddler and real estate hustler. Then he got into land development in Western Canada and at a dinner in 1908 met the great Chinese liberator, Dr. Sun Yat Sen. Dr. Sun persuaded Moe Cohen years later, after Cohen had fought in the World War with the Irish Guards, to try his fortune in new China, and there went the ambitious and adventurous Moe—to become a power in Chinese politics and military affairs.

He helped Chiang Kai-shek modernize the Chinese army and commanded a division in many of Marshal Chiang's victorious campaigns. Among the sons of Han he attained influence greater, perhaps, than was ever possessed by a white man, and for a while he just about ruled Canton and its province. Fluent in Chinese and versed in their customs, he remains a Jew loyel to the old religion. A solid rock of a man, Morris Abraham Cohen, who made himself over into General Ma, with a mandarin's rank, packs 200 pounds in his five feet seven inches of height, with a powerful mind in his powerful body.
